THE BAINBOW. I sometimes have thought in my lonelicat hour That lie on my heart like the dew on the flowers Inst is on my heart like the down on the nowers, Of a ramble I took one bright afternoon, When my heart was as light as a blossom in June; The green-earth was moist with the late fallen showers, The breeze futtered down and blew open the flowers, While a single white cloud in its haven of rest, On the white wing of pence floated off in the west. As I threw back my treases to catch the cool bream. That ecattered the rain drops and dimpled the seas. Far up the bine sky a fair rainbow unrolled

Its soft tinted pinions of purple and gold; 'Twas born in a moment, yet, quick as its birth,

A Sketch.

From the Dover Casette. BY "LIBIAS LESLIE."

A lovely being was Abby M—, young and basutiful, she knell; a willing outary at this world's shrine. Often, as I gazed on her fair brow, have I wondered that so pure a being should be given a home on this cold earth, for methogish her poorly calculated to encounter the storms of adversity, and chilling indifference of a selfish world. Heaven methought a more congenial sphere for her pure spirit. But thus it was—placed here on earth—she sought and seemed to find pleasure in the midst of excitement and dissipation, but her young heart was not wholly dedicated to earth, she longed for something she found not here;—even when surrounded by admirers, and whirling in the dance, conscience, that silent monitor, within each, breast, would come to her, seeming to say—'What dost thou here?' Then would a good, resolution be formed; but, alas! too soon to be broken—for how could she leave a world just, opening as bright to her viow? How many were the silurements pleasure offered, and how eagerly were they accepted by one, 400 many wore the silurements pleasure offered, and how eagerly were they accepted by one, 400 many wore the silurements pleasure offered, and how eagerly were they accepted by one, 400 many wore voice of pleasure, that for herself alone she lived, No'er shall forget the happy smile that played o'er her leatures, when for the last time, I beheld, her in the crowded hall—as she gracefully glided slone to the strains of sweet music. Beautiful she was—and as I gazed on her, I secretly prayed so happy a fare might never be the mirror of other than happy thoughts. Time brings a change

Calm, and bright, and beautiful, fell the night upon Judes; and the bright stars came out and looked with soft eyes on the splendid city, and the beautiful Queen of night arose slowly and man her!
