THE DEW.

BY C. R. PERCIVAL

When the sombre shades of even

Gather o'er the darkened earth,

Silently the dew of Heaven Through the dim air wanders forth ;

And with holy ministration.

Life to fainting vegetation.

Heating on its angel wings,

As a gentle spirit, brings.

Then, as glance the tars of morning

To the night dew owe their births

O'er the new-awakened earth, Smiling flowers her lap adorning,

And the scented mead trioices, Bathing still to fragrant dew ; While a thousand happy voice. Breathe for it their songs anew.

When the sombre shades of sorrow

Bearing on its balmy wings,

Then, as o'er the waking spirit' Wakes anew the loyous morn!

Freshened by the fingrant dew

Choral songs are heard anew.

Flowers of hope and gladness cheer it, From the dew of kindness born, And the heart is like a meadow

Where from supphine and from shadow

The Farmer.

F The Curn Worm.-[Tinea Granella.] Of the numerons insects which prove injurious to the interests of the farmer, few, probably, see more to be dreaded than the con worm. The larve of the insect, observer an ingenious author, which is identical with the mottled woolen moth in the gransty, and usually makes its appearance, in this country, in its moth state, in the months of May, June and July. When fully developed, it usually measures from its head to the extremi-tics of wings, from 7 to 8 100te of an inch. Its habits are remarkable, resting or remaining total-ly inscrive during the day time, and prosecuting its destructive lattors during: the night. We are not aware that this insect has ever proved very de-structive in this rescent.

not aware that this insect has ever proved very de-eructive in this region, though it has occasion-ally made its appearance, and has sometimes done considerable injury. It is generally most activo between the beginning of May and the close of September, and its ravages, during that period, are confined principally to wheat, rye, oats and barley. Indian corn, even when shelled, is rare-ly injured by the Tinka Granetla. After Sep-tember, until the ensuing May," says the author above quated, "this insect is sought in vain.--During, all this long interval it lies concealed in the cracks and interview of the bins, or other re-ceptacles used for the storage of the grain, and is generally protected by its corion. In April or May, it again makes its appearance in a different form; having assumed the aspect and habits of a
