Easto*, May 26, 1819.

Friend Ticknor—I have examined your long-looked for Spelling Block, and take pleasure in stating to you my sentiments in regard to it. The first thing which strikes the eye upon taking it up, is the neatness of its appearance, the whiteness and smoothness of the paper, and the beauty of its typography. The words are, for the most part, those which are in common use, and the transition from easy words to those of more difficult orthography, is well adapted to the gradual progress, which the youthul pupil is naturally expected to make the progress of the progress

LIVERPOOL IRON MARKET.

At a meeting of the leading ironmasters in Staffordshire on Monday last a reduction of £1 per ton was determined on for manufactured and pig iron, and workmen's wages to be reducted in proportion. This result has to some extent been anticipated, so that our present rates will not show a reduction of 1£ per ton from our last quotations. As the reduced rates are now unprofitable to the makers, arrangements arbeing made for blowing out fornaces, and adapting the supply to the mora limited demand. The reduced requirements of the European continent, attendant upon the continued disunthances there, have very injuriously affected the trade; but should this agitation result in greater freedom of commerce, as interest in Great Britais would receive a greater impulse and benight than the trade, as no country in the world can supply so chaptly or concavically the necessary article as of erat Britais; with a free trade or moderate duty we could supply flongary.
Austria, France and Germann, with greater advantage to them, and profit to ourselves. Hungary is more especially interesting to us, as their agricultural produce is largely imported into this country; and were it not for Austrido exclusiveness, our manufactures would be as largely in demand with them.—English Paper.

Your Spelling Book professes to be "for the use of schools," and not a book of reference for learned etymologists; consequently, those who expect to find in it much of the mythology of our language, so to apeak, will be disappointed. Those who require children to burden their miads with the derivations of words, become their miads with the derivations of words, become they have learned the words themselves, may be compared to a man, who, upon approaching a fine appletree, is not content to regale himself upon the templance of the roots of the tree to see what they are like. A GENERAL WAR. A Paris correspondent of the New York Courie writes under the date of May 21st ! "There is a fire kindling which is soon to set all Europe in a bleze! It is hardly permitted to doubt that we are upon the ere of a general war. The recent elections are of a nature to rapidly hasten the catastrophe. It is they, perhaps, which render it inevitable. Had not the Democratic and Social ist party in France issued from the elections with so much increased force, the peace of Europe might have been preserved."
