I WILL BE A MINER TOO.

BY MRS. JULIET M. L. CAMPBELL.

All around me men are delving.
Deep within the troubled earth,
Searching for the darksome treasures
Hidden since creation's birth. Wearying toll and ceaseless effort Bring the buried ore to view :-I will be a miner too! Heart of mine! thou art a cavern, Ead and silent, dark and deep-In thy fathomicss recesses
Splitt gnomes their treasures keep.
Gems of love, and hope, and joyance, Bury there their flashing beau-Wilder passions fret their orison With the fiercenosa of their gleam. Though unburnished, prized and precious,

To the enraptured poet's sight, As the jewels, proudly flashing, On the brow of beauty bright. True, unto the sorded worlding These are gems of little worth, Yet, for thee, high-hearted poet! L will strive to bring them forth! Lamp of truth, my brow adorning, Lighting up the weary way—

I, in pain, will probe my bosom,
Bare its treasures to the day.

Wearying toll and ceaseless effort Bring the burled ore to view ;-Though I be but feeble woman,

I will be a miner too! SLANDER. BY REGINALD VERE. Ob, slander! thou malignant art! True test of the corrupted hear Thou coward hater's coward tool The brave may foll the brave man's brand. The prudent shun the midnight hand.
The slunder's tongue what care can rule,
When on its victim's name it brings
The asp-like venom of its stings? The skilful leech may soon allay The wounds received in open fray : Remorse may stay the felon's knife, And spare the cowering victim's life; Remorse or leach's skill is vain To assuage the standerer's ceaseless pain; No time the injury can bound, The poison festers in the wound. Say, hast thou slandered? Dogt repent? Be this thy clinging punishment!
Thou wouldst recall the coward il l,
Thou wouldst thy crime confess; Exert thine efforts, try thy skill Thy victim to redress.

Thy victim to reuress.

Retract thy words, re-write the tale;
Think'st thou thy rhetoric will prevail?

Will half of those, who heard the lie. Hear thee retract the calumny ? Thy one tongue spoke, but it has spread By hundred tongues the lie it bred; And couldst thou speak with hundred tongue Thou couldst not clear thy victim's wrongs. Will half of those thou hast deceived will half of those thou hast deceived Renounce the tale they first received Upon thy credit, and believed, Nor deem some fresh deceit is meant? * The slandeted can't be innocent, But thou prevailest; years glide on; All good remembrances are gone; But evil recollect stays: And there will are be room to raise. The evil tale of other days, Long after the defence is dead, To whisper "such and such" was said;

This knowledge can be gained by the student of History alone, who is in his studies borne back to ancient sions, who is in a student words care to ancient times, and is enabled by that means to make comparisons. By pursuing a course of this kind I think the students in our School world attain not only to a more thorough knowledge of History, but of Philosophy elso. To convince you of this it will only be necessary to compare it with some of them, but as more than one would doubtless be wearisome, it may suffice to cite as an example that of Bell and Lancaster, a method of instruction very much in two your in each part of our country. By this system only one school master is required—he instructs those of his pupils who are farthert adspanded, they in their turn instruct those who in point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of advancement come next, and so on to the point of the plan of frow ideas" on the subject.
