Things didn't go as Hal expected i He popped the question by the mill, And there was sacked-idest-rejected! That night he heard a whimpering noise, Which hindered him—pror youth from sleeping, He took a key hole peep—and oh: There sat his lady, sadly weeping :

Weep on thought he c'est bun, egal,
For joy to think we'll never marry: Her bird is dead-or aunt's been cross : urse her tears ain't shed for Harry And snon they parted carelessly! And Hal became a desperate rover!
He went from Afric to the pole,

And travelled all the contract over! But fet him wander where he would-No matter what the scene before him-He found some unknown friend at work. Who cast a queer kind influence o'er him

Who squared his overdrawn accounts, And saved him twice from being undone Who sent him those billets a'eus. Who was it wrote, and found him friends Of every grade, from prince to peasant 1 Who sent him papers postage paid ? And every year a Christian present !

Halnever knew-but he returned, The same good natured, careless being; Resolved to settle down at home, Having beheld all things worth seeing. His early love almost forgot?

Perhaps he thought her dead and sainted? But yet she met him at the door, Burst into tears—poor girl—and fainted!

Oh, woman's heart's a curlous thing, And eurious ways they take to show it; And he must be extremely flat Who thinks that he begins to know it:

STEAMING FOOD FOR STOCK. A 'practical farmer,' a correspondent of the Ger-mantown Telegraph, furnishes the following in-firmation, upon a subject of much interest to cattle

Much has been said and written or iate in layor of steaming food for stock. Those who have adopted the practice, present many unfurnountable arguments in its favor, and in some case it has been reduced to a regular system, the professional inducements operating upon the mindfor those who have thus deviated from a beaten tack, being, firstly, the great saving of food and, secondly, the

After that time, finding my cows got in low condition, I see that time, finding my cows got in low condition, I see that time, finding my cows got in low condition, and got in low condition, I would make the pino of linesed oit to have done.

Contrasting his consumption of hay to this and former years, he calculated he had saved thirty tous of hay and thirly tous of straw, which supplied its place, reckoning hay at 31. 10s. and straw at 11. 5s. would amount of 571. 10s. while the expense of cutting and steaming amounted to less

xpense of cutting and steaming amounted to less

By steaming, we do not charge the nature of the food submitted to the process, it does not convert poor fodder into rich; its chief action and design poor founder into rent; its enter action and design is to render a greater per centum of the nutritive particles contained in the majes digestible. The grinding of grain is beneficial simply from the fact that by its minute division every particle of the substance is exposed to the juces of the stomach. In hay there is much nutritions matter which secapes without contributing to the benefit of the animal, as its fibrous and hard texture prevents its being thoroughly bloken up by mastification.

Could we devise some method, whereby the division of those substances used as food for animals could be economically and minutely effected, a very great saving would be eccured; but this is not practicable in all cases. By cutting hay and coarse fodder into short lengths, and softening its texture by steaming, we bring it to a condition somewhat resembling the nature of green food, which is easily crushed or masticated by the animals, and the division of its furtritive particles so thoroughly effected by the process, that every particle, upon being taken into the stomach is made to yield immediately, its due quantity of nutriment and support to the system. The expense animal, as its fibrous and hard texture prevents its triment and support to the system. The expense of steaming is certainly no very serious objection to its adoption. The increasity apperatus costs but little, even when the stock to be fed is large, and as the business is perfumed in winter which there is little to occupy time, the cost of labor, as an item, scarcely deserves regard.

WHAT A FARMER SHOULD BE.

and prosperity.

In our Republican Government he should be instructed in his constitutional rights, and taught to vindicate them by a k-rae and condensed slocution. It will be a happy event for our country when our farmers, so educated shall have the accendency in our halls of legislation, and thereby put a stop to the fallacious special pleadings of demagogues, who have already reduced our country, possessing all the means of prosperity in a pre-eminent degree, to a most patiable condition, by their miserable legislation.—North American Farmer.

INFLUENCE OF THE STOCK OF

There has sometimes been a dispute as to whether the stock will so influence the grait as to whether the stock will so influence the graft as to change the character of the fruit; some persons denying that such is the fact. We have before us, at present, a very forcible proof of this influence, in some samples of apples from the orchard of Mr. F. H. Miner, of this county. There are three lots of the Winter Pearmain, grown up three different stocks, accompanied by seedlings from each of the stocks. Not only do theseedings differ from each other, but the different lots of Pearmains are almost as widely diverse in size, color and general appearas widely diverse in size, color and general appearance. As they are not in eating condition, we are is wheely diverse in said to the said to t have,—Prairie Farmer.
