REMEMBRANCES;

Off at the hour when evening throws
Its gathering shades o'er vale and hill,
While half the scenejin twilight glows,
And half in sunlight glories still,
The thought of all that we have been,
And hoped and feared on life's long way,
Remembrances of joy and pain,
Come mingling with the close of day.

The distant scene of youth's bright dream,
The smiling green, the lustering tree.
The murmur of the grass fringed stream,
The bounding of the torrent free;
The friend, whose tender voice no more Shall sweetly thrill the listening ear, The glow that Love's first vision wore: And Disappointment's pangs are here.

But soft o'er each reviving scens
The chastening hues of Memory spread;
And smiling each dark thought between,
Hope softens every tear we shed.
Q, thus, when Death's long night comes on,
And its dark shades around me lie,
May register beams from Memory's sun. May parting beams from Memory's syn Blend softly in my evening sky.

But the silence of the churchyard is now "My son !- dost thou see this grave? and dost thou read the record in anguish, whereof may come repentance?" "Of what should I repent?" answers the son; "and why should my young ambition for fame relax in its strength because my mother was old and weak?

"I can well believe I am not," exclaimed

JERUSALEM.

Colonel Chesney in his work just published, on the surveys of the rivers Euphrates and Tigris, gives the following interesting description of the city of Jerusalem and its environs:

"When approached by the ordinary pilrim route, Jerusalemichas something of a desolate appearance, presenting at the top of a stone valley a range of turreted limestone walls, above which appear a few of the most relevated dwellings, and some of the cupolas. and minarets, whilst like most other eastern cities, the interior is but a succession of dull streets and dead walls, sloping eastward, interspersed with gaudy churches and heavylooking convents; but when viewed from the heights on the easiern side the effect is particularly striking, the whole city being seen from thence in complete detail. The Mount of Olives on Jebel-el-Tur, commands to the southward a view towards Bethlehem and some of the hill country of Judea, and eastward is seen part of the valley of Santa-Saba, with the Dead Sea glittering beyond at the foot of the mountain of Arabia Petrea. But westward the scenery is still more remarka-ble. In this direction Mount Olivet descends
