ADDRESS. -Brother Odd Fellows :- We have assem bled upon the Anniversary of one of the most important battles of the War of 1812. It was upon this day, thirty-six years ago, that Andrew Jackson, and about three thousand undiciplined militia, met the trained bands of Great Britain, fresh from the fields of victory-upon the Peninsula, and by their skill and bravery, rolled back the tide of vic-Thirty-six years ago the city of New Orleans, at day dawn, presented a scene of wailing desolation and despair. A cloud of deepest gloom overshadowed the place,bright eyes were dimmed with tears, and warm hearts grew cold at the approach of the hired Soldiers of England, whose "watch word" foretold the fate they were destined to meet, if the banner of a free people trailed in the dust. Never before had the sky of "Freedom" looked darker, for never before were preparations for success made by the English government upon a more gigantic

We see this spirit.

There are various organized Societies, for great and holy purposes, but all these Societies, or compacts, are formed of men of the same sectional views and feelings, that such men should unite is nothing strange or odd—the world is full of such institutions, every religious association has its origin from this common fountain. From this founiain spring the Catholic associations and the Protestant associations, and all the different is simply throughout the land, and where a brother strays from the beaten track, or addown in the code of laws, digested for his guidance by each particular Society, he is fathers, and is now following after strange (Gods.

But Odd Fellowship, contemplates something more than the union of men of the same political or religious creeds. Their object is to unite into a social fraternity, all seets and all parties, for their mutual benefit in the dark hours of destitution and sepair. It may be that this gave rise to our name,

If by our actions, but one heart is made light, if but one family is relieved when want and hunger, with all their cursed crew, stand shaking their long at-tenuated hands at the sufferers, should it not justify all persons in the community, in yielding to our Institution their approbation and support.

In looking over our annual Report for the last ten years, we find that ten thousand widowed families have been relieved—that forty thousand brothers who were in distress and want found assistance from our Order, and nine hundred thousand dollars have been expended in benevolent purposes in Pennsylvania. When we look at all this should we not yield to the principles of our Order, our esteem, our approbation and love? Adversity and sorrow teach experience,—

In this reply, one of the active principles of our Society is admitted, for the chief design of Odd Fellowship is to ameliorate the sufferings of our fellow men.
