She gives dazzling talents, but withholds common sense. She endows the charges made against me by my husband—it was communicated frankly to those who—acted as his counsel last winter; and that communication resultant to the some threat communicated frankly to those who—acted as his counsel frankly to those seems as if nature had made her favorite children more susceptible to these weaknesses of human nature than men of mounts when the children is not expected in the mor law, I have such a right, I claim it—if I have not, I appeal to your sense of sacred justice to give it to me. Indeed I am not guilty in act or thought of any of the things of which I am accused, in the printed memorial of my misguided husband, and which I have now before me. They cannot, believe me, be proved—no witness can maintain them, and if any profess so to do, I desire and claim the right to be present when such evidence is heard—that my friends and counsel may be there to aid me—that secret testimony shall not harm me—that my own witnesses may

Now gentle Spring returns—her genial health
Warms Nature through; while vivifying showers
Awake her from the winter sleep of death;
And inning breezes call forth budding flowers.
An emerald-vest, now decorates the trees;
A velvet carpet for Earth's floor, the grass,
Just peeping out, prepares to weave. The bees,
in busy companies, too quickly pass,
To suck delights from blossoms, which around,
Their dewey fragance spread o'er all the air;
While merry warblers make the woods resound;
As now, to woo their mates they fast repair;
Last bright-winged butterflies, heaven-born appear,
And sighing Summer, next, leads on the rolling year. A SONG. I have loved thee as I never Loved a mortal heretofore, And each moment I endeavor
To forget, but love thee more.
When the heart its worship giveth

SPRING. BY WM. ALEXANDER

Where it meets no love agam, Then a death within it liveth, Which doth poison every vein: And thy look is like the chilling -Fall of ice on Southern air,
When the summer is distilling
Balm and music every where.
Thou hast changed my heart's sweet honey,
Into bitter gall and brine,
Yet my soul would still be sunny,
Caught it not a gloom from thine. Fare thee well! but, oh, remember,

When the spring-time lights thy way, Thou dost make my life December, While it should be sumy May. Should my spirit flee before thee To the angels' world above, Sainted still, 'twill hover o'er thee, And protect thee with its love.

From " Poems of Hope and Action." THE PRESS.

BY WM. OLAND BOURNE. A million tongues are thine, and they are heard Speaking of hope to nations, in the prime Of Freedom's day, to hasten on the time When the wide world of spirit shall be stirred With higher aims than now—when man shall call Each man his brother—each shall tell to each His tale of love—and pure and holy speech Be music for the soul's high festival! Thy gentle notes are heard, like choral waves, Reaching the mountain, plain, and quiet vale—Thy thunder tones are like the sweeping gale, Bidding the tribes of men no more be slaves, Bidding the tribes of men no more be slaves, And earth's remotest island hears the sound That floats on ether wings the world around.
