CHOICE OF A BUSINESS.

One of the greatest difficulties a young man encounters in his teens," and sometimes the matter is postponed to a later period, is the selection of a business for himself. So many relatives and friends, to say nothing of the scores of advisers, are to be , consulted, and so many important interests tration. We cannot too much admire the to be weighed, that a trade or profession might sometimes well nigh be learned, while deliberations about it are pending.

Few persons but have a natural bias for some particular kind of occupation, and in the choice of his occupation, still there is dispositions of their children, and thereby being able, if expedient, to second rather than oppose the "turn" of their minds.
