of this State, and electors of the Sovereign. They may exercise any temporal power in the government of the Popedom that the by law, and all other Judges required to be Pope may confer upon them. In this sense, therefore, a Cardinal has such a title and order of Nobility, and owes such allegiance to the Pope, as a temporal sovereign, as to fall both within the letter and spirit of the law, which requires all allegiance and fidelity to any Foreign Prince, State, Potentate or Sovereignty whatever, to be renounced, and itles and orders of Nobility to be relinquished on admission to citizenship of the U. States. In other respects, a Cardinal, as such, is merely a civil officer. He may also be a Deacon, a Priest, or a Bishop, but as a Cardinal he has no religious duties to perform. He is in fact a member of the Pope's Cabinet, for the management of his affairs, or an ambassador or representative to attend to his interests in other kingdoms. Cardinal Pole was only a Deacon when he was made Cardinal, and for many years acted as Legate. So little did his office partake of the spiritual character, that his high rank as a Cardinal did not prevent him from being considered a candidate for the hand of Queen Mary England.
