From the Philadelphia Gun. SOCRATES AND MARTIPPE.

"LOUB " VB. "MX." Socrates Snooks, a Lord of Greation, A second time entered the marriage relation; Xantippe Caloric accepted his hand, They thought him the happiest man in the land. Ere the first waning honey-moon passed o'er One morning to Xantippe, Socrates said. think, for a man of my standing in life This house is too small, as I now have a wife. So, as early as possible, Carpenter Cary Shall widen my house, my barn, and my dairy. O. Socrates, deary. Xantippe replied. I hate to hear everything vulgarly my-ed. Whenever a gentleman speaks to his bride, He ought to say "our"—no pronoun beside the ought to say "our"—no pronoun beside; So, whenever you talk of your chattels again, Say our dairy, our cow-yard, and our pig-pen. With your leave, Mrs Snooks, I will talk as Pil speak of my horses, my garden, my trees. Say our, the lady cried out in a rage; I won't, Mrs. Snooks, though'you ask me an age. O woman, though only a piece of man's tib, If the story in Genesis tells not a fib, If your naughty companion e er quarrel with you, ou frequently prove the best man of the two In the following care this was certainly true, The lovely Xantippe just pulled off her shoe And laying about her on all sides at random. The adage was verified "nil desperandum For Socrates Snooks, after trying in vain To ward off the blows which pattered like rain, Believing that "valor," best part was discretion," Crept under the bed like a terrified Hessian. But the dauntless Xantippe, not one whit afraid, Converted the siege into a blockade; And when Socrates cried, it is so wearisome here. She sweetly replied, say "our," my dear.

At length, when he'd reasoned the thing in his pate, He concluded 'twas useless to strive against fate, And then like a tortone produding his head, Said, "May we come out from under our bed" "Aha," said his wife, "Mr Socrates Snooks, I see you accede to my terms, by your looks; I'll let you come out, and from this happy hour, If you'll only obey me, I'll never look sour 'Tis said, the next Sunday, ere going to church, My dear, may we put on our new linen breeches?

HORRIBLE DREAM -We once heard a very laughable joke which a hen pecked husband got upon his Mrs. Caudle. He had borne her railing for many a long year, till one morning while she was blustering away about the wood, short potatoes, flour, &c., he remarked very pathetically :.

"Jerush, I had a dream last night, a very I dreamed that I was taken sick and died." "Well, if it was no more than that," said reasons:
1. The perfect equality of width and thickness which

The best Family Medicine now before the public, It has been computed, that during the last twenty years, three millions of persons have leasured in every shape and annually been benefited by the use of these Medicines; a fact which speaks volumes in favor of their curative properties—a single trial will place them beyond the reach of competition in the estimation of every patient. By their use the estimation of every patient will place them beyond the reach of competition in the estimation of every patient. By their use the blood is restored to a pure and healthy state freed from all impurities. The system is not reduced during their operation, but invigorated, and they require no restraint from business or pleasure, with or the knowledge of the mild in this book any emay cure himself, with or the knowledge of the prescriptions in general routine of prins the cause of manhood's rations on marriage—beantswhich it would not be public prints.

AGRICULTURE AND THE COUNTRY If the country is ever inviting, it is in the Spring of the year, when nature is awaking from her long slumber, and dressing herself in her beautiful new robes. At other seasons, perhaps, nature really possesses more charms. The rich flowers of summer and the autumnal fruit have power to administer a stronger sensual delight. But then at those seasons, the mind of the beholder has been partially satisfied with the pleasures of rural sights, and the heart has become less sensitive to the gushing, but no longer fresh song of birds and other long suspended rustic sounds. It is the time, too, most interesting to the husbandman, who has not been weaned by the long interval of the winter months from a desire to return once more to his old intercourse with his mother earth. So far from that, his passion for the farm and its cultivation increase with his years, and life would be tedious indeed, that he should be obliged to pass in absence from his native country home. Such are some of the meditations, we may well believe, of the farmers of the good old times, and many of those who are proprietors and cultivators of the soil at the present period. But such are not apt to be the contemplations of the more youthful portion of the rural population. More easy and frequent communication with the city has presented to their silly fancies the apple of discontent as well as of temptation; and they have partaken of both. Their eyes have been opened, as they imagine, to the sudden knowledge of good and evil, and the farmer's boy books, not even a monthly inagazine, and scarcely a daily paper to be found, and no time to read them if they could be. In fact, he is quite convinced that the country grows duller every hour.
