Bond Was read to the American Academy of Arts and Sci-ences, upon the 15th April: and was the occasion of the present investigation. Since Mr Bond's paper is still unpublished, I shall be' obliged to make constant reference to it, and even receptiulate source parts at it, in order that the proper relation of the two paths of research may be correctly understood : I. The author of the Mecanique Celeste proved that Saturn's Ring, regarded as solid, would' not be sus-tained about the primery, unless it had decided irre-gularities in its structure. But the observations of Herschel and others have failed to deiect any induca-tions of such irregularity; and a takenous series of tions of such tregularity; and a laborious series observations have finally convinced Mr. Bond of th utter improbability of any important tregulatities, an he has, therefore, adopted the conclusion that Satur he has, therefore, adopted the conclusion that Saturn's Ring is not solid but favid. 'Mr Uond's argument is chiefy derived from observation,; whereas a new in-vestigation of the mechanical conditions of the pro-blem has led me one step further. I am now convinc-ed that there is no conceivable form of irregularity and no combination of irregularitics, consistent with an ar-tual ring, which would permit the ring to be permanent-ly maintained by the primary of it acre solid. Hence It follows, independently of observation, that Saturn's Bing is not solid. And now it is worthy of remark theref. as adopt as the heat for calculation the mark

In conclusion, it affords menthe highest gratification to know, that the discovery of the law of the planets' rotation, which I have attempted to explain, has directed th PUBLIC SCHOOLS. ME.
