put up at the large brick tavern, known as ——House. The proprietor in answer to some interrogatories informed me, that he owned 400 acres of land, had raised the present season 900 bushels of wheat, 650 bushels of cats, and expected to harvest 1500 bushels of corn—that he owed no man a dollar; and never took a newspaper in his lite.

I had a great curiosity to learn how a family kept up with the current news of the day, when debrived of the only means of gister:

WHAT'S THE MATTER!

A gentleman was once travelling through Ala., where water was not the most abundant article, when he discovered a specimen of a one-profe cart-such as some of the good citizens of North Carolina use for purposes of emigration, when they are necessitated to seek a new location, in consequence of the supply of material for the manufacture of tar failing in the old homestead. Every appearance indicated a camp for the night tho the only moving thing was a fight smart chunk of a boy," who was evidently in trou-The inside of the cart gave a concert of baby music, and a succession of groans, indicating deep distress. This and the grief of the boy, aroused the kind sympathy of the traveller, who inquired if anything was the matter.

"Is anything the matter?" replied the boy—"I should think there was. Do you see the old fellow lying there, drunk as thunder ?-that's dad. REAL AND IDEAL. - Dow, Jr., in one of his discourses, in which he describes the contrast between semblance and reality, hits off a ball scene:

"A woman," says he, " may not be an angel, though she glides through the mazes of the dance, like a spirit clothed with a rainbow. The young man may behold his admired object on the morrow in the true light of reality, perchance emptying a wash tub in the gutter, with frock pinned up behind-her cheeks pale for want of paint-her hair mussed and mossy; except what lies in the bureau; and her whole contour wearing the appearance of an angel rammed through a brush fence into a world of wretchedness nce knew a ploughman, Bob Fletcher his name. Who was old and was ugly, and so was his dame.

THE HAPPY PAIR. THE following graphic picture of domestic han piness in humble life, was written by Townsend HAINES, Esq., late Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and now Register of the Treasure f the United States at Washington: BOB FLETCHER.

Yet they lived quite contented, and free from all strife, Bob Fletcher the ploughman, and Judy his wife As the morn streaked the east, and the night fled

They would rise up for labor, refreshed for the day.
And the song of the lark, as it rose on the gale.
Found Bob at the plough, and his wife, at the patt. A neat little cottage, in front of a grove.

Where in youth they first gave their young hearts up to love,
Was the solace of age, and to them doubly dear.

As it called up the past, with a smile and a tear Each tree had its thought, and the vow could impart That mingled in youth the warm wish of the heart The thorn was still there, and the blossoms it bore When the curtain of night over Nature was spread And Bob had returned from the plough to his shed Like the dove on her nest, he reposed from all care his wife and his youngsters contented were there isked, which is the best guarantee that can be greated to protect the public from imposition.

The Farmer.

CROPS ADAPTED TO THE SOIL. An improved and truly wise and economical culture of the soil must be founded upon an exact knowledge of the materials of which the soil is composed, and this indispensable knowledge can only be procured through a careful study of the rocks or strata out of which the soils are derived. Hence it is, that Geology is now universally regarded by the professional teachers, scientific writers, and and the most skilful men of practice in agniculture, as equally fundamental with chemis try, in its relations to sound methods of cultivation. The farmer should have a clear conception of the nature and composition of the strata around him, for without this knowledge he can get no true insight into the chemical and mechanical propensities of the soil, which is nothing else than the substances, some of them in large and some in minute quantities, and that they are all equally necessary to its productiveness, the importance of a correct geological knowledge, indicating their presence or absence in particular locality, will be plainly perceived-silica, alumina, lime, mag. nesia, oxide of iron, patash, common al and phosphoric acid-and this will be sulmore distinctly seen when the inorganic elements in any of the ordinary crops are shows in comparison. AGRICULTURE.

Agriculture has made greater strides to wards a perfect system; within the present century, than in all the many hundred years proceding. That which was, until about tifry years ago, a simple plodding routine, at once destructive to continued fertility, and ruinous to the interests of the farmer and land owner, is now gradually becoming a dignified science, which, properly understood, and faithfully carried out, will not only reward the labor of its study by the increased fruitfulness of the soil, but extend its benefits beyond the energetic agriculturist himself, to all classes of the community. It may be a slower, but it is a surer road to wealth, than all the gold mines of the Pacific : and by the stimulus which good farming necessarily creates, by the more imposing position it gives to the state from them increased value of the land within its hims and by the active employment it affords to other trades and professions, it enables the people of the Commonwealth to sustain with ease, its dignity, and credit under necessary taxation.
