An' you see mother used to be the tarnelest critter for evenin' meetins. | She used to go out pretty late every night, an' dad was afraid I'd get into the same habit, so he used to put me to bed at early candle-light, cover me over with a pillar, an' put me to sleep with a boot jack. Wal, dad had to get up every night to let mother in ; if he didn't get down and open the door pretty darned quick. when she cum, he'd ketch particular thunder, so dad used to sleep with his head out of the winder, so's to wake up quick, an' one night he got his head a little too far out, an' he slipped out altogether ; an' down dad cum casiumus right down on the pavement, an" was smashed into ten thousand pieces?

"What! was he killed by the fall?" "Wal, no, not exactly by the fall. I rather kinder sorter guess as how it was the sudden tetch up on the pavement that killed him. But main she cum hum, an' found him lyin' thar, an' she had him swept up together, 'an, put'in a coffin, an' had a hole dug in the buryin' ground, an' had him put in an' buried up an' had a white-oak plank put up to his head and had it white-washed all over for a tombstone."

"Yes, but math didn't seem to mind it a tarnel sight. The next feller she married was Jacob Hayes, and the way main makes him haze is a caution, now I tell ye. If he does anything a leetle out o' the way, main makes him take a bucket and whitewash brush and go right up to the burying ground, and whitewash the three pak planks just to let him know what he may come to when she's planted him in the same row; an' got married to the fifth linsband. So you see my family arn't a 'tarnal sight opposed to a dose of matrimony;"
