THE FISHERIES.

The difficulty, on this subject, between our government and Great Britain, is nothing new.

The "North American Fisheries" have long been a bone of contention between the two countries- even from the earliest days of our national existence. Seizures by the British government were made long ago for alleged violations of the treaty of 1818 between the two countries; and it was on the discussions that then arose, about the matter, says the National Intelligencer, that the Government of Great Britain so far relaxed its rights under the treaty, as to permit our fishermen to pursue their vocation in the Bay of Fundy, provided that they did not go within three.

miles of the shore on either side. About the same time the Argus was seized on the northeast coast of the island ot Cape Breton, and tried and confiscated. And this claim to exclusive jurisdiction, according to their construction of the treaty, has always been insisted on by Great Britain, though not al-

It, also, appears that the British Minister notified our government, as early as the 7th inst., that frequent encroachments were made by the United States vessels upon their fish-already had been taken to prevent their recurrence. So that, according to this representation, the present difficulty has arisen from no new interpretation of the treaty, nor by any impulsive movement, on the part of
