CASTING OUR SHADOWS.
"I people's tempers could cast shadows, what would they be ?!" said Augustine, ashe and eventually in all. — This is a kind of interposition which well befits this republic, and saday by day we find oursefves engaged in far different questions, we have cause to teel gratified that the opportunity is offered as a sweet little dove, and cousin Julia's a sweet little dove, and cousin Julia's a sweet little dove, and nine "—here Augustine stopped.
According to Augustine, our mare selves the rac asting their shadows; that is, I suppose, we are throwing off impressions of what we really are all around us; and, in the tact is, our associates know would as and y by while pleading for the full toleration of religion, and that a people who reject its hold rankees: "Suppose we follow out Augustine's idea, and ask, " And mine, —what shadow would is to see ourselves as others see us. The fact is, our associates know us better than we know ourselves: they see out. A weak and sublimated imagination with see altogether without anxiety some of the sub see altogether without arxiety some of the sub whom deviation are shadowed for the row the prise as others see us. The fact is, our associates know us better than we know ourselves: they see our selves as others see us. The fact is, our associates know us better than we know ourselves: they see ourselves as others see us. The fact is, our associates know us better than we know ourselves: they see ourselves as others see us.

The fact is, our associates know us better than we know ourselves; they see our sha-dows, which, though they may sometimes are producing founders and followers of er mark, the bones of those who had little than we know ourselves; they see our sha-dows, which, though they may sometimes be longer or shorter than we really are, the outlines are, in the main, all correct: for our shadow is, after all the image of our-self. We sometimes hear of people who are "atraid of their shadows," and it seems cow-ardly and hoolish: but if Augustine's idea ardly and toolish : but if Augustine's idea should come to pass, a great many would most ridiculous experiment upon human cre-of a gentleman, and an cfirontery that nothshould come to pass, a great many would have reason to be frightened by the image of their inner selves, so deformed and unsight-ly it might be, or so disagreeable, that no-body would wish to take a second look. Now, it is this shadoring out of what we really are, in spite of outselves, which makes it so immeasurably important that we be liv-ing right : for other people are constantly ing right; for other people are constantly seeing and feeling our influence, whatever it may be. Every child at school is throwing off a next to her; Every child at home is castudg off kind and gentle influences, in the little it news to her; Every child at home is castudg off kind and gentle influences, in the little off kind and gentle influences, in the little it news to her; to new the her to the scale of the little off kind and gentle influences, in the little it news to her; to new the her to the scale of the little off kind and gentle influences, in the little it news to her school is throwing off a strange about the school is throwing off a little will fail here.
