AN ANECDOTE OF LAMB. A cheesemonger, who, having realized a large fortune, retired with a genteel wile and large fortune, retired with a genteel wile and still genteeler daughter to enjoy the "otium cum dignitate" in a nobleman sort of way, at Hisborate, where he had a superb villa, was cum dignitate" in a nobleman sort of way, at Highgate, where he had a superb villa, was nbove all things most anxious to conceal from every one of his acquaintances that he ev-re had been engaged in trade at all morees pecially in so low a calling as that of "Cheees: monger:" It was the canker in his bloom-ing rose of hie, and any allusion, however ing rose of hie, and any allusion, however high and any allusion, however high and any allusion a deadaccidental, was construed by bim, into a dead-upon the preniums paid, without increasing the a nual preniums paid, without increasing the a ly and never-to-be-forgiven insult.

Id a large party in the house of the village clergyman, Coleridge, Lamb, and the quon-dum cheesimouger were present. In a discus-sion on the hard Poor Law, which was then agitating the political and social circles of London, the retired tradesman took high ground, and irritated the kind hearted Elia by violent depunciations of the poors: turnby violent denunciations of the poors turning around, and with great appearance of triumph over the silent wit, he said, to the company generally, but more particularly to Lamb: "You must bear in minil, sir, that I have got rid of all that stuff which you poets call the ' Milk of Human Kindsess."--Lamb looked at him steadily and gave in his acquiescence in these words-" Yes, eir, 1 am aware of it-you turned it all into cheese several years ago." The reifred cheesemonger was inconsolable.

A NODEL CANDIDATE. The following description of a Mississippi candidate, taken from a Mississippi paper, will answer as a "model," candidate for almost any quarter where popular suffrage prevails:
