WASH FOR OLD APPLE TREES. We have heard much in regard to washes for fruit trees, and although many excellent articles have deen recommended, I am aware of none more decidedly valuable and efficacious, when applied to old and decayed trees, than a wash made of common unbleached house ashes. If an old tree be thoroughly wished with this, it will almost immediately take a new start, and the smell of the application is so offensive to most insects that they will not trouble the tree or truit while it tetains strength. If applied in the first of ummer the rains will wash it into the crev-

TT PRESERVING BACON PROM THE FLY.am induced by motives which every houskeeper will appreciate, to communicate through your valuable journal, the following effectual and simple method of presetving liacon from injury by the fly or shipper : When your bacon is smoked early in the spring before the fly has made its appearance, take quick lime slacked to a dry powder, and rub the meat thoroughly on every part with it, leaving it adhere as much as possible ; hang up your meat, and rest secure from any trouble from insects.

I have tried the above method (communicated to me by an experienced housekeeper) and so well satisfied am I with the experiment, that I consider it of sufficient importance to be made public. I have tried many other means for preserving meat from the fly, but this is the only certain remedy I have ever yet found .- American Farmer.
