FEOM OUR REQUIAR CORRESPONDENT. DEAR JOURNAL :-- We are in the midst of unprecedented prosperity, in our young Borough. Every tradesman and mechanic is crowded with work. For some time nothing occurred worthy of note; but the last week, however, was very different. Many bacchanalisms fell into the hands of justice and were severely dealt with-having been caged. On the 7th inst., a teamster at the store of Matson and Baber, robbed them of $70 or more; he atterwards went to the livery of Mr. Bretz, hired a horse and has not since been heard of. Thus, there was no way lett but to keep him from assuming a promnent position, and then Select trustworthy nominees, and fight it through against this faction and the Whigs united. This was the policy dictated by common sense; for with good candidates, the party could, at the start, cope with the two united, and it would conjunually gain strength by preserving its purity, and presenting sound men for office. Unfortunately, sthis policy was disregarded, and some of our office seekers, more auxious for their own promotion than for the success of the cause, on the withdrawal of the Hon. F. W. Hughes from the county, they enlisted as privates in the ranks of this faction, and thus made it much more formidable.

THE VOICE OF MANY DEMOCRATS!

Mr. BANKAN-DEAR SIR :- Standing as we do n a very humble attitude, we would assume to write it few lines in much humility and offer them of the public notice through your faithful paper.— We claim no merit for writing short hiographics of we claim no merit for writing whom hographies of small politicinas, but we do succerely pretend to be authoritatively acquainted with some of the iniqui-tions plans and practices of some of the corrupt and lines worn politicinas of our county, and may take occasion to expose them. The editor of the Reginter joining to a capacious' swallow for taking in party nominees, as a matter of course, passes an empty encominate upon each individual candidate and argues with great apparent force; but with such substitutes the taphysical fact peculiar to himself, we admit, that some of the Democratic candidate. didates have strong claims and ought to be elected, because they have never asked office, and others have strong claims and ought to be elected, because they have always had office. This is argument, though perhaps had office. This is argument, though perhaps had office, of such protound deptit, hat no ordinary mind can wade through it. He says Frailey is a man of influence and experience. Ferhaps, if we needed a man in our Legislature next winter, whom we required to descend to the initiation of the initiation of a more efficient precursor could not be employed. Nay, sir, experience as surely the oracle of truth and the parent of wisdom, and experience hat between it for the countries, and bargain, and sale between a few corrupt political mercenary tecches, which begins in for, and distribute the different offices among themelves long before the elections; the peoples will vote as they esteem it proper, and it is a must happy state of nifars, and we trust an my: olate franch of the peoples province and prerogative; to make the office-seekets come before them with clean hands and pure bearts, it they desire and expect to be supported by them. As for Frailey beiling a man of experience, whilst we are ready to adjust the fact, that he lins been in office for many years, and should have profited by it, we be-fieve in verity and in truth, that he is one of those who remain ignorant in spite of experience, that he who remain ignorant in spite of experience, that he is a heartless knaw and a heartless poletician, and in the language of one of his former neighbors, notoriously corrupt, who seeks aggrandizement at random, and will eventually fail a victim in the work of his own foolish plans of aspiration. "Virtue is sold—good God, what price:

Oh! bane of hope-seducing cheat."

Can recompense the pangs of vice!
Oh! bane of hope-seducing cheat.

Can mun, weak man, thy powers defeat?"

Of Mr. Christ, Frailey's coadjutor, we have but little to say; we have always looked upon him as being a very exemplary man, albeit, if he is a good man let him beware that his course does not prove fatal to him too, for according to E-sop's fable, the gooses that was caught with aflock of starks bad to ose his head slee, when the good husband. I am changed with loudly sabing an office for the last faftes years; theirtuth of that charge is, that in 1849 and in 1851 I was recommended for the Home of Representatives. I am also charged with inving asked the appointment of Post Master. I wonder where that informat, I am called a Know Nothing, and that I have hid before the public the delinquent conduct of the Potsville Post-Office for positives gain; assertions all equally untrue and such as can only emanate from a source of deep seated ignorance, shielded behind two loys. I am charged with deserting the Democratic ranks. I presume on the ground that I chose to lay the truth before the public in through a paper, which does and always has seen in to advocate political principles different from those entertained by me. Such nonserie does not those entertained by me. Such nonserie does not prove anything. The studied, attempt in the Post Office article to avoid the truth may do for such people that have a taste for groundless "slander," and proves the good company, character for the breeding of the writer or writers, as the case may be, who I alimit are adepts in the low office to which they have volunteered to be engaged in.
