READING RAILEGAD.—From the pamphlet by J. M. Sanderson Esq., noticed last week, we make the following extract, comprising the general characteristics of this Road. compared in its pre-eminent natural advantages as a great transporting medium, with other prominent roads:

The "Reading Railroad" connects the town of Potaville with the city of Philadelphia, by way of Reading. It is ninety-three miles in length, and runs on a descending grade of seventeen feet to the mile, until it reaches a dead level axtending to the mile, until it reaches a near reverse a length of thirty-six thousand feet. Between the Schurlkill and the Delaware rivers, the road passes and the mile. ses over a short summit of forty feet to the Three engines of the first class are required to carry five hundred tons over this ascending grade at the rate of three miles per hour; whilst a single engine of the same class can bring down the same load from the mines over the main line—that is to say, the level portion of the road—at the rate of ten miles to the hour. The simple statement of this fact determines the advantage possessed by the Reading over other great lines of traffic. On the New York and Eric Railroad, for example, there are eight summits varying from forty five to sixty feet to the mile, and rising above tide-water to an altitude varying from 436 to 1,336 feet. It follows, therefore, that one engine on the Reading can do the work of four on the New York and Eric; and the expenses of transportation are, o course, correspondingly reduced.

The Reading Railroad was originally designed and constructed for a great special purpose—to wit, the transportation of coal—and the attention of the officers and engineers was directed to such material points as would enable them best to se-cure the object then in contemplation. Since its completion, however, connections have been formed with other roads, subsequently built, by which an outside business, so to speak, far surpassing the local trade, must ultimately be secured. Everything fonds rapidly to that end. However extensive the coal business may become, it is a fixed fact that it must henceforth be regarded as only one prominent item from which revenue is to be drawn.

It was foreseen, indeed, that in all probability the road might ultimately become a link in a great chain of public improvements, which were to extend through the Northern Counties of Pennsyl vania, and connect the metropolis of the State with the Lakes. These anticipations have been realized to a very important extent. After long years of delay, the great line of road to the North and West, via the Little Schuylkill, Catawissa, Williamsport and Erie, Sunbury and Erie, and Williamsport and Elmira roads, was opened on the 18th of December latt. the 18th of December last. These works, costing at least $8,000,000, are immediate feeders to the Reading road; from which a very large increase in its passenger and merchandise traffic may with confidence be looked for. By them, direct communication is made with the various important roads in Western New York, and thus with the Canadas and the great West. A continuous line 2 00 Canadas and the great West: A continuous line
2 00 of railroad communication to the Lakes, equal in

2 00 New York, is thus secured to Philadelphia; and a
1 00 new field of commerce and travel is opened to a vast country, whose abundant natural resources only needed these facilities to encourage its enterprise and lead it on to the greatest prosperity. It embraces (according to the census of 1850) thirty-four counties drained by the Susquehanna—con-taining an area of 7,000,000 acres, valued at $214, 2 00 000,000, with a population of 755,000 souls—and possessing agricultural products, as well as coal, 1 83 iron, and lumber, to an almost unlimited extent.

1 00 The business from this source cannot be computed 2 00 at less than from three to five hundred thousand 1 00 dollars per annum. And this may be considered a most reasonable estimate.

The distance from Elmira to Philadelphia, by 2 00 way of New York, is 363 miles, passing over sev. 2 00 eral grades from 40 to 60 feet to the mile; while 2.00 the distance by the Catawissa route is but 262 2 00 miles; making a difference in favor of the latter 2 00 of 101 miles over a road having but one grade of 2 00 35 feet to the mile. Stating the cost of transportation, by way of New York, at 12 cents per ton 1 00 per mile, the aggregate cost would be $5 441; 2 00 while by the Catawissa route it would be $3 93. 1.00 making a difference in favor of the Reading, of $1 51 per ton. The difference in expense will, of itself, determine the course of trade, while the sa-2 00 ving in distance of 101 miles, as already stated, 2 00 gives us a right to claim at least a large portion of Southern traffic and travel.

A portion of 1 00 the coal which will thus reach the market is pecuculiar, being semi-bituminous, and adapted as a substitute for the bituminous coal, rather than competing with the anthracite. From those various sources-the channels designed by nature for reaching the trade of these regions we have ulti mate prospects beyond any estimate which has hitherto been made. Other works, calculated to swell the general business of the road, remain to be constructed.

Among these is the Lebanon Valley Bailroad, of the length of 531 miles. This road opens a direct communication through Reading to Harrisburg, connnects at that point with the Pennsylvania and Southern and Northern roads, and passes through a valley call country, among the richest in agri-cultural and mineral resources in the Common-wealth of Pennsylvania. It has casy grades and light curvatures, attained at an expense compara-tively-small. The Board of Managers, after careful examination of the character of the proposed road, the effect of its construction upon the property of the Company, and after consultation wi many of its principal proprietors, deemed it their duty, under authority conferred by the Legislature, to subscribe for 6,000 shares, or $300,000, of the stock. Of this sum, one-half has been paid They consider that work of immense importance the Reading road. The increase in the amour fron." It is an able and comprehensive doc-of stock and bonds apparent in the last general account, arises chiefly from this subscription, and from the nurchase of stock in the Mount Carbon

To reach the trade of the West, various reads have been constructed. A brief analysis of their peat that all correspondents who desire the respective length, cost, receipts, det, will show more emphatically than any elaborate argument can show, the relative value of each:

Yet they are willing to give their aid to suffering humanity wherever it is found, and cheer the hearts of the destitute, through the agency of this institution. Such disinterested benevilence cannot be too highly spoken of, and although many ungenerous remarks have been made in regard to these noble-minded men, I think it is ue to them to use the language of Mr. Street, that he 'never saw charity more willingly bestowed and such sympathy manifested in regard to the suffering poor.' And moreover, the smallest do-

The Canal and Dams are frozen up-the ice is from 4 to 5 inches thick-and this avenue cannot be opened for several days yet, unless the ice is broken and the channels cleaned. of July:

1 15 1 05 1 05 1 15 1 05 1 05 The cates to Richmond and Philadelphia are 30 cents higher than the opening rates in 1854. They are the same rates charged after July 1, 1854, except a deduction of ten certs per ton to Spring Mill, and the different points above on the line of the Road. It is needless for us to state that these high rates, at the opening of the trade, have caused a deep feeling of opposition throughout this entire region-and there is a settled determination to submit quietly no longer.

The rates by Canal we have not yet received, but presume they will correspond as heretofore, with the above rates, making the toll $1 to Philadelphia, with proportionate rates for the line. We understand the Schuylkill Navigation Company are making arrangements for the trans-ship ment of Coal from the Bosts at Philadelphia, for more distant markets, in order to increase the boat capacity on the line of Canal. This ought o have been done long ago.
