PENNSYLVANIA --- ITS] BANKING CAPITAL The annexed extract is from the pen of the editor of the Germantown 'Telegraph, and speaks his honest opinion we presume, of Gov Pollock's recent course in relation to the Banking policy of Pennsylvania:

In this indiscriminate approval of new banks we do the appear of the foremony of the banks we do the appear of the foremony of the banks we do of the fortstown Bank. If there is any necessity, accord-ing to these principles, for the Anthracite Bank, the Ta-maqua Bank and the New Castle Bank, we cannot con-ceive upon what grounds the Governor vetoed the Potts-fown Bank. Rather than the should have made such a distinction without a difference, he should have "put his foot down." and refused to sign any bill for a new bank. The argument used that banking capital does not add to the actual business capital of the State, should have operated with all its force upon a mind, that we had hoped was settled upon this question. It is no arguat present. hoped was settled upon this question. It is no arcu-ment that Philadelphia has less banking capital than New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, or any other State; the only true argument is, whether, in consequence of this deficiency, we have suffered in our busi ness or substantial interests; and this we imagine would be hard to show."

The fire apparatus were soon on the spot; but owing to the difficulty of obtaining water, added to a want of proper organization, it soon became evident that no human power could save the extensive establishment from destruction.
