THE SOLDIER'S WIDOW. BY N. P. WILLIS,

Wo! for my vine-cisd home!
That it should ever be so dark to me.
With its bright threshold and its whispering tree!
That I should ever come,
Fearing the lonely echo of a tread,
Beneath the roof-tree of my glorious dead! Lead on! my orphan boy?
Thy home is not so desolate to thee.
And the low shiver in the lindan tree
May bring to thee a joy;
But, oh! how dark is the bright home before thee! To her who with a joyous spirit bord thee! Lead on! for thou art now
My sole remaining helper. God hath spoken,
And the strong heart I lean'd uponds broken.
And I have seen his brow.
The forehead of my upright one, and just,
Trod by the hoof of battle to the dust!

He will not meet thee there, Who blessed thee at the eventide, my son! And when the shadows of the night steal on, He will not call to prayer.

The lips that melted, giving thee to God, Are in the icy keeping of the sod! Aye my own boy! thy sire
Is with the sleepers of the valley cast,
And the proud glory of my life hath pass'd
With his high glance of fire.
Wo! that the linden and the vine should bloom,
And a just man be gather'd to the tomb!

Why, bear them proudly, boy!
It is the sword he girded to his thigh,
It is the helm he wore in victory!
And shall we have no joy!
For thy green vales, 0, Switzerland, he
I will forget my sorrow—in my pride!

THE EFFECTS OF WIND AND WATER. In Lieut. Maury's new volume "The Physical Geography of the Sea." he compares the erald Isle, and clothes the shores of Albion in ever-green robes: while in the same latitude on this side, the coasts of Labrador are fast bound in fetters of ice." Mr. Redfield says, "in June 1831, the harbor of St. John's, New-

For about four weeks easterly winds had prevailed in Great Britain and Ireland, during which period the warmth of the Gulf Stream was prevented from being waited to those coasts. The result was, that the most intense cold within the memory of man was experienced there; ice formed in large quantities on the sea-coast, and, as a world's wonder, the navigation of the rivers Thames and Mersey was greatly obstructed, and the port of Liverpool almost ice bound for some days. In Ireland, the effects of this severe cold was such, that thousands upon thousands of small birds -larks, thrushes, &c., &c.,—which do not migrate, were found dead in the fields and on the highways. In Scotland, the effects of this severe cold were more wonderful still. Hugh Miller-that eminent geologist and keen observer-in the Edin-burgh Witness says, "the present intense frost-coincident at new moon with a stream tide—has killed many of the littoral shell-fish around our shores, and they now lie by thousands and tens of thousands along the beach. On the beach below Portobello, and for at least a mile on the western side of the town. they are chiefly of two species, Solens Siliana, or the edible spout fish or razor-fish, and Mactra stultorum, or the fool's cockle, both of them molluses, which burrow in the sands above the low-water line of stream tides. The spout-fishes, when first thrown ashore, were carried away by pail and basketsfull by the poorer people; and yet of their shells enough remain in the space of half a mile to load several carts; but the fishes themselves, devoured by myriads of birds, chiefly gulls, have already disappeared. It is probable that both species will be less common on our coasts than heretofore, for years to come ; and their wholesale destruction by a frost a few degrees more intense than is common in our climate, strikingly shows how simply, by slight changes of climate, induced by physical causes, whole ra-try would have been moist and warm as usual, and no such severe frosts as that described, would have been experienced. From these new facts, we can form some new and more correct ideas of the effects of winds and waters upon climates; and how they affect the destiny and welfare of nations, and living

The most unfavorable condition for sleep cannot prevent its approach. Coachmen slumber on their coaches, and couriers on their horses, while soldiers fall asleep on the field of battle, amid all the noise of artillery and the tumult of war. During the retreat of Sir John Moore, several of the British soldiers were reported to have fallen asleep upon the march, and yet they continued walking onward.
