

THE TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT. Fallacious Arguments of the Liquor

Of late, a favorite trick of the papers de voted to the Rum interest, has been to extract sibility. Think of it, parents. Relinquish the articles from kindred prints, published in States possessing a Prohibitory Law, pur ves and children. Persevere in an opposite porting to give reviews of the operations of the law in those States, and crediting them to misery and degradation. respectable papers. Lately the Philadelphia Ledger published an article said to have originated with the New Haven Palladium! when it should have been credited to the Hartford Times. The article in question was in reference to the effects of Prohibition in Connecticut, and displayed them in no favorable light. It was engerly seized upon by Rum prints, and purposely credited to a respectable paper, in order to give weight to the false assertions therein contained. The article has elicited from the distinguished Jurist. Chief Justice Williams, of Connecticut, and ex-Governor Dutton, of the same State, interesting letters, in relation to the matter .-Ex-Governor Dutton says :

How any intu can justify his conscience in making Salt assortions ray triling the operation of our law, is be youd any compensation. The change in New Haven is sustrixing, that no one here questions it. Judge Williams, writing from Hartford, concludes an interesting letter, written in consequence of the article copied into the Ledger, as follows:

Gar, as follows: On the great question, whether as much liquor is re-tailed in our cits, I can have no doubt, and I should not supplies, judging from effects, there could have been a doubt. We see fower bloated, faces in the morning, doubt. We see fewer bloated, faces in the morning, hauging around shops. We see fewer men staggering in the stroits, this streets are less disturbed by noise and tunuit—and the whole moral aspect of the city has been changed by the operation of this law, it is true that by some change in the folice Department, there may have been more courage inspired in the hearts of the violators of law, still, the convictions that daily take place have there it been whole out remeet themselves to respect the that have the conversion of the sector of th ions only—I call to my aid the opinious of infends with have better masnes of knowledge than 1 have of Tempar-ance Conventions, of public officers, of City Missionarius, of candid men who ariginally opposed the law, but who have witnessed its salutary effects, as well as general in-formation from the public papers. From such sources and from my own observation, 1 an of opinion, that this law has hid a most salutary effect, in staying a plague, the most alarming of any which ever threatened this portion of our country. If the law has not done all that we desired, it has not reformed all the drunkards, there are numbers of wives and children who are Blanking God for what it has blaced on it first and put a stop to the traffic, it has placed on it these and to infame—and even if this whole race of topers were to puss off unreformed, the next generation would bless that hav, which, by closing the paths of per-dition, had saved them from a similar fite.

One line of such testimony is worth columits of the assertions which find their way into the prints devoted to the perpetuation of the traffic in intoxicating beverages. The trick of the Ruin papers, however, is exposed, and the public can in tuture, therefore, recieve with much allowance, statements which appear in those papers, in relation to the operation of Prohibition in States where it now exists. A specious argument of the enemies of Prohibition in this State, is the assertion that
