committees, money, and all the means requisite for a concentrated and concerted action of all the Irish in America. A State Convention, with delegates from fifty-five counties, and representatives of seven other States, was held at Boston on the 14th inst., at which an address and resolutions embodying a platform and programme, were adopted and issued to the Irish in the United States. It purports to be a movement of Irish Americans to help the Irish govern Ireland; but the wise will undoubtedly look upon it as the commencenent of a more perfect organization of the Irish in America, to obtain control of the political affairs of this country.
