seemed to me, in fact, as if he learned by mere intuition. I was myself utterly astonished, and at the same time delighted with his progress. I have hinted above that he was designed for the day raise himself to eminence. Whilst under my instruction, I discovered his early genius for po-ives of the battle of Marathon, the bravery of Miltiades and his ton thousand Grooks raised his intriotic feelings to enthusingin, and drew from him expressions which I thought were embodied n a few days afterward in some well written ver ses in a Charleston paper, on that fur-famed une-qual but successful conflict against tyranny and oppression, and suspecting my talanted scholar to be the author, I went to his desk, and asked him if he did not write them; and hesitating at first, rather blushingly, he confessed he did. I then said, "I knew you could do such things, and I suppose you have some such pieces by you which I should like to see. Do bring them to me." He consented, and in a day or two brought me a number, which I read with pleasure and admiration, at the strong marks of gonius stamped on all, but here and there requiring, as I thought, a very slight amendment.

I had bired a mathematician to teach both him and myself. (for I could not then each that science,) and in this he also made such wonderful progress, that at the end of one year he entered the Junior Classin Charleston College triumphantly, whilst others who had been studying four years and more were obliged to take the Sophomore class. About the end of the year 1828 I left Charleston, but I heard that he highly distin-quished himself, and graduated in 1830. After that he taught mathematics for some time, and

MR. FREMONT'S VIEWS .- It is of the greatest importance that the people should be intimately acquainted with the position accupied by a candidate for the Presidency. Mr. Fremont's views before his nomination, are admirably expressed in the following reply to an invitation to attend a Republican meeting held in New York before the assembling of the recent Republican Convention in Philadelphia. Mr. Fremont writes to the Committee of Invitation.

NEW YORK, April 29, 1856. Gentlemen-I have to thank you for the honor of an invitation to a meeting, this evening, at the peal of the Missouri Compromise." I am opposed to Slavery in the abstract, and upon principles sustained and pade habitual by long settled, con-victions. He promptly and unhesitatingly replied, let Fremont be our next choice. A nomination Judge McLean did not desire; his friends perceived it, and the gallant Fremont was selected with acclamation.

John C. Fremont is the candidate of no party, for the Presidency. The people in their majesty, have selected him to be their standard bearer. As he is the candidate of the friends of Freedom, every man opposed to the extension of Slavery into free territory can consistently support him, irrespective of party predilections. Let the North with Fremont, give one blow next November for her rights, which shall effectually settle this much FREMONT'S LETTER TO THE NATIONAL AMERICANS.-The National American Convention of New York having nominated Mr. Fremont for the Presidency, he acknowledges the compliment in a short and pertinent letter, in which he says:

"I shall he able in a few days to transmit you a paper, designed for all parties engaged in our cause, in which I present to the country my views of the leading subjects which are new put in issue in the contest for the Presidency.
