SCREE IN A VERMONT WINTER. T CHARLES & RASTWAY. "Ils a fearful night in the winter time.

As cld as it ever can be;

The roar of the storm is heard like the chime
Of the waves on an angry sea.
The moon is full, but her eliver light
The storm dashes out with his winns to-night;
And o'er the sky, frum south to north.
Not a star is seen as the winds come forth,
In the strength of a mighty gice. All day the snow came down—all day—
As it never came down before.
And over the earth at night there lay
Some two or three feet or more.
The fence was leat, and the well of stone;
The windows block'd and the well-curb gone;
The haystack grown to a mountain litt;
And the wood pile looked like a monatar drift
Ar it lay at the farmer's door.

As the night set in, came hall and snow, And the air grew sharp and chill, and the warning roar of a sullen blow was heard on the distant hill; And the Norther! seel on the mountain peak, In his breath how the old trees writhe and shriek! He shout along the plain, ito! Ho!? He dives from his nostris the blinding snow, And growis with a savage will!

Such a night as this to be found abroad
In the snow and the stinging air,
A shivering dog; in the field by the road,
When the hall through his shangy hair,
The wind drives hard, doth crouch and growl,
And shut his eyes with a diamal how;
These to shield himself from the cutting sleet,
His nose is pressed on his quivering feet.
Pray, what does the dog do there? His master came from the town to-night,
And lest the traveled way;
And for hours he trod with main and might
A path for his horse and sleigh;
But desper still the snew dritts gree,
And colder still the fierce wind blew;
And his mare, a beautiful Horgan brown,
At last o'er a log had floundered down,
That deep in a huge drift lay:

Many a plunge, with a frenzied snort,
She made in the heavy snow;
And her master strove till his breath grew abort,
With a word and a gentle blow;
But the snow was deep and the tugs were tight,
His hands were numb d, and had Lat their might;
So he struggled back to his sleigh again,
And strove to shelter himself in vain,
With his cost and his buffalo.

He has given the last faint jerk of the rein He has given the test tains jerk or the rein.
To rouse up his dying steed;
And the poor deg howls to the blast in valu.
For help in his master's need.
He's rives for a while with a wistful eye.
To catch but a glance from his heavy eye,
And wags his tall if the rude wind dap The skirts of his coat across his isp.

And whines that he takes no heed.

The wind goes down; the storm is o'er; The the bour of midnight past; The forest writhes and bends no more In the rush of the mighty blast.
The moon looks out with a silver light
On the high old bills, with the snow all white; And the giant shadow of Camel's Hump' Of ledge, and tree, and ghostly stump, On the sileut plain are cast.

But there are they—by the hidden log—
Who came that night from the town—
All dead! the man and his faithful dog,
And his beautiful Morgan brown!
He sits in his steigh—his tace is bland—
With his cap on head, and the reins in his hand:
The dog with his head on his muster's feet,
And the horse half seen through the crusted sleet,
Where she Lay when she floundered down!

We may be called extremists or fire enters, or what not—it does not matter. While we cannot be driven into the abaudonment of principle to serve party success, we are ready to maintain the rights and institutions of the South oven to disunion. This conviction we have fastered in the Southern mind. It is a pity it was not fostered there twenty years since. It would have sured; to the parties a deal of trouble. But the Southern party has something else to do now Having checked for a time the Black Republican erusade, we must push forward those reforms at home which are necessary for the assertion and maintenance of our equality in the Union, or of our nationality and independance out of it.

But Nicaraugun is the great political nucleus, and while the 'National' inen of the South are busy over the spoils of the victory wonthrough the courage and boldoess of the Southern party, let us put forth all our strength in Nicaraugua. "We-have only tour years to prepare for the great contest in 1860. Give Walker the power and he will solve not only the Central American Question, but with it that of Cuba. Once firmly established in Nicaraugua he will restore the West Indies to their original condition as stave colonies. It can be demonstrated that the comparative decline of New Orleans commenced with the abolition policy of England in the American tropics. Nicarsgua and the Africanization of Cuba to make the decline more than comparative, perhaps irretrievable. It only requires on the other band the reorganization of Central America as a slave-producing country, with the redemption of the West Indies from negro-barbarism, to make New Orleans the centre of a wast ropical canpire, and to realize, in connection with the Pacific trade, the advantages to which she is guographically entitled. This is a work for the Southern party. We have shown our power in antional politics; let us give it practical direction at home.

"In the foregoing we have briefly reviewed the causes' which led to the reaction in the North, and sketched the programme of the Southern party eauses which led to the resistion in the North, and sketched the programme of the Southern party for the future, upon the assumption that Buchan and selection was a certainty. But what will be the signification of his election, with regard to all the important questions of the day, we shall be compelled to leave to the solution of time. So far as it may convey a rebuke to the fanatical spirit of the North was for as it may have affected page. of the North has far as it may be an effectual pro-test against the open attempt of one section to subject another to the tyranny of a hostile majori-ty; so far as it may show that the resistance poli-ey on the part of the South is really the only poliey on the part of the South is really the only poliey that can have the Union and our rights and our honor at the the saine time; thus far at least it will be a triumph for the South and a valuable lesson to politicians of both sections. It will prove that Northern interest is superior to Northern fanaticism, and that slavery though the subject of sectional agitation, is really the strong est conservative and national element in the Union.

"What the Northern wing of the Democratic Congress may do with the slavery question, we shall have to leave to future developments. We fear however, it is deady imbued with the non-extension theory to which so many Democratic leaders, North and South, have given their sancvan Buren and John C. Breckenridge making speeches from the same platform and in the same cause, and the elder Van Buren and Mr. Buchan an embracing upon the same construction of the Nebraska bill.

Why so ernest in this denial of the Northern Democracy devices to preserve the political equality of the South, to which the extension of slavery is resential? But after all, we have the Oviend Manifesto, to which Mr. Buchanan is pledged.—There is sound shough Southern doctrine in that, Hamifesto, to which Mr. Buchanan is pledged.—
There is sound shough Southern doctrine in that, and if Mr. Buchanan shall live up to it, well and good; we will be the first to throw the mantle of lorgivoness over all his pass political sins of omission or commission. Meantime, as we have often said nefore, though not unexceptionable, he is our cloude for President; but in supporting him we have chosen to do so with our eyes open, and have desired that the Southern people should have their eyes open also. If they vote with them shut, it will be no fault of ours; if deceived in any particular, they cannot shake their heads and say we did it.

"The fature is yet a problem. Assuming Mr. Buchanan's election to be a certainty, the horison is still mixty.
