The contrast he drew between the views then expressed and the views held in 1857, were forcidrawn. Expectation was increasing on aide and unensiness on the other. At last came a atation from Forney's letter to Roberts. The position became intensely mirthful, and strongly disposed to stamp and cheer; the Democracy were in anything but a pleasant mood. Mr. Johns, of Fayette, several times tried to stop him -he still persisted, and every attempt at inter-ruption but increased the mirthfulness and enjoynent of the Americans and Republicans. Other lso attempted to disturb him, but he was bent of finishing his speech, and finish it he did. THE TEMPERATURE OF JANUARY, 1835, AND JAN
