The whip was resorted to, which brought out only her kicking propensities to the fullest extent. ber kishing proposities to the fullest extent.

Uncle John swore. "What a rillisin that horse jockey is," said he; "he gave me his word of THE COAL LANDS comprising the jockey is," said he; "he gave me his word of honor, as a man, that she was as kind and gentle as a lamb. If ever I come across him I will horsewhip him—if I don't, then horsewhip me," and he famed again, but it was of no use; Muley was determined to aby where she was, and we were obliged to let her stay till the latter part of the afternoon, when she very condescendingly walked out, and kindly permitted herself: he harnessed to the light wagon, when Uncle John and I got in, and started off finely, and we amiticipated a pleasant drive; but as we were passing a small bridge over a creek, about a mile from the house, I inadvertantly touched her with the whip on the flank, to dialodge afty, when bang went her heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. We leaped out in less than heels through the dasher. The garden were and engine of the lank heels through the darher. We leaped out in less than no time, as a matter of course, and confound her, she brought all standing to an anchor, as the sailors sny; there she was, right in the centre of the bridge, so that nothing in the shape of a wagon could pass us on either side; here was a predicament. Vehicle after vehicle came up, and the people in them became impatient. At last we got a rope from a teamster, who was waiting to pass over the bridge, and made it fast round her neck. "Out of that she must come," said Uncle John, dead or alive. Now, Mr., have the goodness to put a couple of your best horses to that rope, and if she don't come, pull her neck off." The horses were hitched-crack went the whip. and Muley found out that if she must she must, and reluctantly consented to be pulled a short distance from the bridge into the road. The blockade having been raised, the fleet departed-not so Muley; there she remained till nightfall, when prudence whispered to her "cats," and pricking up her ears, with a neigh, she was off in a smart trot for home, which we reached safely, but no

The following morning we tried her again, and to our agreeable surprise, she started beautifully, and kept along in fine style, when we overtook a gentleman in a York wagon, going along quite leisurely behind what we took to be a fine looking mare. Holding up a little to examine more particularly, we were accosted by the inmate of the wagon with:

"That's a fine looking mare of yours, sir!" "Yes," said Uncle John, "and she's as fine as she looks—that's not a had looking mare you have there, either."

"Can't well be beaten; capital marejair, though I must say it myself. Would like to buy your horse; make a good match for one that I have at home-like to trade sir?" "Well," said Uncle John. "my mare suits me. but if I can make any thing by the operation that might alter the case; if you warrant' your "Kind and sound?" asked Uncle John. "Warrant her," said the stranger. "Done," said Uncle John, and in the next minute the mare was unhitched and the transfer made -the quickest horse trade I ever witnessed. "Good morning, gentlemen," said the stranger, and he gave Muley a touch with the whip, and the

"Sorry," said Uncle John; "never knew her to do such a thing before; coar her a little stranger, and she'll be ull right directly-go long!" and he in turn touched his mare with the whip; up she reared on her legs, and giving a tremendous sheer, upset the wagon and threw us both out lackily without injury. Snap went the shafts, and she off like lightning down the road. "Look here," said Uncle John, "didn't you warrant that mare kind?" "Never knew her to do any such a thing before but don't grumble old fellow, for curse me if I have

"Yes," said I, "and if you'd stuck out a while longer, I would have sold her for a quarter of the money;" and I bade him good day. This was
