Ile has taken great care in the selection of his Drugs, Medicines, &c., and can therefore, cheerfully recommend each and every one as being PURE AND UNADULTERATED.

Ile is determined to give his undivided personal attention to his business, at all hours of the day and night when required, believing that the faceas and reputation of physicians as well as the invaluable floes of their patients depends in a great measure on the care of the Apothecary and the quality of his drugs and mixtures; and he feels confident that quarrass, when obtained at the expense of virtue and health, will not be the only question with his customers; when once his reputation as a careful and competent Apothecary, shall be satisfactorily established.

This reputation he is determined to build up, with the assistance of a share of the public patronage—a fair proportion of which is guaranteed to him by numerous triends, independently of that which he hopes to obtain by close attention to business and strict attention in mixing prescriptions which may affect the health and lives of his customers.

Deception in the preparing and compounding of medicines for ruthless speculation he will never vesor't to though it is notoriously true that such a dangerous deception is much more extensively and successfully practiced by drugglists than can be readily imagified.

PROFESSOR WOOD'S HAIR RESTORATIVE, Is, no doubt, the most wonderful discovery of this age of progress, for it will restore, permanently, gray hair to its original color, cover the head of the bald with a most luxuriant growth. remove at once all dandruff and itching, cure all scrofula, and other citaneous eruptions, such as scald head, etc. It will cure, as if by manic, nervous or periodical headsche; make the hair soft gloss, and wavy, and preserve the color perfectly, and the hair from falling, to extreme old age.

DEAR STE:—Having become prematurely quite gray, I was induced, some six weeks since, to make a trial of your Restorative. I have need less than two bottles, but the gray hairs have all disappeared; and although my hair has not fully attained its original color, yet the process of change is gradually going on, and I am in great hopes that in a short time my hair will be as dark as formerly. I have also been much gratified at the healthy moisture and vigor of the hair, which before was harsh and dry, and it has eased to come out as formerly.

Important Discovery. CONSUMPTION,

DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND THEOAT

ARE positively curable by Inhalation, which conveys the remedies to the cavities in the lungs through the air passages, and coming in direct contact with the disease, neutralizes the tubercular matter, aliays the cough, causes a free and easy expectoration, heals the lungs, purifies the blood, imparts renewed vitality to the nervous system, giving that tone and energy so indispensable for the restoration of health. To be able to state confidently that Consumption is curable by inhalation, is to me a source for unalloyed pleasure. It is as much under the control of medical treatment as any other formidable disease; intesty ont of every hundred cases can be cured in the first stages, and fifty percent. In the second; but in the third stage it is impossible to save more than five per cent., for the lungs are so cut up by the disease as to bid defiance to medical skill. Even, however, in the last stages, inhalation affords extraordinary relief to the suffering attending this fearful scourge, which annually destreys indights fearful scourge with the second of the control of the control of the surface of the second of the control of the control of th

Poetry. The following poem was, written by James Hedden wick, a Scotch poet, little known in this country. Who that ever loss a brother or sister could mad these lines without a falter in the voice and a tear in the eye? FIRST CRIEF.

They tell me, first and early love Outlines all after-dreams: But the memory of a first great grief To me more lasting seems. The grief that marks our dawning youth, : ... To memory ever slines: ... To memory ever elings; and o'er the path of future years A lengthened shadow filings, Oh! oft my mind recals the hour,
When to my father's home
Death came, an uninvited guest,
From his dwelling in the tomb:

And I shudder yet to think upon The anguish of that night! A youthful brow and ruddy cheek Became all cold and wan:
An eye grew dim in which the light
Of radiant fancy shone; Cold was the cheek, and cold the brow,
The eye was fixed and dim;
And one theremourned a brother dead,
Who would have died for him!

I know not if 'twas summer then. I know not if 'twas Spring;
But if the birds sang in the trees
I did not hear them sing; If flowers came forth to deck the earth, Their bloom I did not see;— I looked upon one withered flower And mone else bloomed for me!

A sad and ellent time it was Within that house of wor. All eyes were dim and overcast, And every voice was low; And from each cheek at intervals The blood appeared to start, As if recalled in sudden hatte To aid the sinking heart!

Boltin we trod, as if afraid
To mar the sleeper's sleep,
And stole last looks of his sad face
For memory to keep. With him the agony was o'er,
And now the pain was outs:
As thoughts of his sweet childhood rose,
Like odor from dead flowers!

And when at last he was borne after From the world's weary strife, How oft in thought did we again Live o'er his little life. His every look, his every word, Ills very voice's tone, Came back to us like things whose worth Is only prized when gone!

That grief has pessed with years away, And Joy has been my lot; But the one is long remembered, And the other soon forgot! The gayest hours trip lightly by, And leave the faintest trace;— THE LETTER.

BY HELEN L. BOSTWICE. Oh, the long expected letter, In the dear tamiliar hand! O'er the waters and the land.
Bring my rocking-chair and scissors,
Watch the baby, close the door!

Now, I warrant me, he wrote it
In a business study brown!
For the "Mrs." looks like "Messrs."
And the stamp is upside down!
Pity he's so careless—giving
All his lines an up hill turn;
Yet, I think the sign's a good one—
Let me epen it and learn.

"Yours received,"—a fair beginning;
"Health improved"—good news, indeed!
"Quite contented,"—that's but so so;
"Lims files swiftly,"—ab. I head!
"Fishleg, gunoing,"—pool: I: warrant
When h; shoots, a man will fall!
"Chirise charmond,"—"ploules, ladies,"—
Exciemation points and all!! Really, sir, this looks like business
In a somewhat novel line!
In my next, I'll surely tell him
Of that charming trip of mine.
Of the steamer's mirth and music,
Forfeit games, and dancing free,
And the monlight promenading,
Of the "merric companie!"

Ab! what is this? "Were you but with me, "Darling children—dolls and drums; "Paroquet with splendid feathers."
What a liabel when he comes! "Has a bases when he comes:
"Had St. Mary,—lovely sunpets,"—
There's a post lost in him!
"Lonely Sabbaths—wary absence;"
"Hone, sweet home," is blurred and dim. "Love"—farewell;"—would it were double.
Choleest blessings crown the man
Who, inspired of good, invented.
The epistolary plan!
Bless the ship, the car, the mail coach,

Bless the hands, where'er they be,
That have brought this little missive
Twice a thousand miles to me! A Clever Sketch.

THE BOX TUNNEL. BY THE AUTHOR OF "CHRISTIE JOHNSTONE." The 10.15 train glided from Paddington, May 7, 1847. In the left compartment of a certain first class carriage were four passengers; of these nest class carriage were four passengers, it tuess singularly enough two were worth description.—
The lady had a smooth, white delicate brow, strongly marked eyebrows, long lashes, eyes that seemed to change color, and a good sixed delicious mouth with teeth as white as milk. A man could not see her nose from her eyes and mouth, her own sex could and would have told us some nonsense about it. She wore an unpretending grey-ish dress, buttoned to the throat with lozenges-haped buttons, a Scotch shawl, that agreeably himselt that, he has not much expected.

Her opposite neighbor was what I call a good wrist just visible as she held it.

Her opposite neighbor was what I call a good style man—the more to his credit, since he belonged to a corporation that frequently turns out the worst imaginable young men. He was a cavalry officer, aged 25. He had a monstache, but not a very repulsive one; it was far from being one of those subnasal pig talls on which soup is suspended like dew on a shrub; it was short, thick and black as a coal. His teeth had not yet been sorred by tobacco smoke to the color of tobacco and black as a coal. His teeth had not yet been turned by tobacco smoke to the color of tobacco juice, his clothes did not atick to or hang on him, they sat on him; he had an engaging smile and what I liked the dog for, his vanity which was inordinate, was in its proper place, his heart not in his face, jostling mine, and other peoples, who have none;—in a word, he was what one oftener hears of than meets—a young gentleman. He was conversing in an animated whisper with a companion—fellow officer—they talked about what it is far better not to do, women. Our friend clear-

Captain Bolignan thus encouraged, recounted to Miss-Haythorn the following: 'A lady and her husband sat together going through the Box Tunnel—there was one gantleman opposite, it was pitch dark; after passing the tunnel, the lady said, 'George, how absurd of you to salute me going through the tunnel.' 'Told no such thing!' 'You didn't?' 'Me! wby?' 'Why, because somehow I thought you did!'

Here Captain Bolignan laughed and endeavored to lead his companion to laugh, but it was not to be done. That rain entered the tunnel.'

Miss Haythorn-'Ab.' Mins Haythorn—'Ab.'
Dolignan—'What is the matter?'
Miss H.—'I sin frightened.'
Dolig. (moving to her side.)—'Pray do not alarmed, I am quite near you.'

Dolig.— You know my name?
Miss H.— Theard your friend mention it I wish we were out of this dark place?
Dolig.— I could be content to spend hours here, reassuring you sweet lady.'
Miss H.— Nonsense.'
Dolig.— Fweep! (Grave reader, do not put your lips to the cheek of the next pretty creature you meet, or you will understand what this means.)
Miss H.— Ee!.

Friend—What is the matter?

Miss H.—'Open the door—open the door!'

There was a sound of hurrled whispers, the door was shut and the blind was pulled down with hostile sharppess.

If aby critic falls on me for putting inarticulate sounds in a dialogue as above, I answer, with all the insolence I can demmand at present, 'Hit hoys as big as yourself,' bigger perhaps, such as Sophooles, Euripides, and Aristophanes; they began it, and I learned of them, core against my will will.

Miss Haythorn's scream lost a part of its effect became the engine whistled forty thousand murders at the same moment and fictitious grief makes itself huard when real cannot.

Between the tunnel and Bath our young friend had time to ask himself whether his conduct had been marked by that delicate reserve which is supposed to distinguish the perfect gentleman.

With a long face, real or feigned, he held open the door—his fate friends attempted to escape on the other side! implessible! they must pass him. She whom he had insulted (Latin for kissed) do-She whom he had insulted (Latin for kissed) de-posited somewhere at his foot a look of gentle, blushing reproach; the other whom he had not insulted, dartait red hot daggars at him from her eyes, and so they parted. It was, pethags fortanate for Delignan that he had the grace to be friends with Major Hoskyns of his regiment, a veteran laughed at by the youngsters, for the Major was too apt to look cold-ly upon billiard balls and cinara: he had seen youngsters for the Major was too apt to look coldly upon billiard halls and cigars; he had seen cannon balls and lisstocks; he had also to tell the truth, swallowed a good bit of the messroom poker; but with it some sort of meral poker which made it as impossible for Major Hoskyns to descend to an ungentlemanly like word or action, as to brush his own trowsers below the knee.

Captain Dolignan told this gentleman his story in gleeful accent; but Major Hoskyns heard him coldly, and as coldly answered that he had known a man to lose his life for the same thing; "That is nothing," continued the Major, "but unforturately, he deserved to lose it."

At this the blood mounted to the young man's temples, and his senior added, "I mean to say he

Let the disbelievers in human perfectibility know that this dragoon capable of a blush, did this virtuous action, albeit, with violent reluctance, and this was his first dam per. A week after these events, he was at the ball, not the first, since his return, blen contended. He was in that state of factitious discontent which belongs to us amiable. factitious discontent which belongs to us amiable English. He was looking in vain for a lady, equal in personal sitraction, to the idea he had formed of Georgo Dhlignan as a man, when suddenly there glided before him a most delightful vision! a lady whose beauty and symmetry took him by the eyes—another look: "It cannot be!" "Yes it is!" Miss Haythorn! (not that he knew her name!) but what an apothesis.

The duck had become a pes, hen—radiant, daxsling, she looked twice as beautiful and armosttwice as large as before. He lost sight of her.— He found her again. She was so lovely she made him ill—and he alone, must not dance with her, or speak to her. If he had been content to begin or speak to her. If he ind deen content to begin her acquaintance the usual way, it might have ended in kisting, but having begun with kiszing, it must end in nothing. As she danced, sparks of beauty fell from her all wround, but him—she of beauty felt from her all taround, out him—see did not see him; it was clear she nover would see him—one gentleman was particularly assiduous; she smiled on him. Dolignan was surprised at his success, his lit-taste, his uginess, his impertinence.

Dolignan at last found himself injured. success, his in-taste, his sugmers, his impertinence.
Dolignan at last found himself injured.
"Who was this man?" "and what right had he to go on so!" "The had never kissed her, I suppose," said Dolly. Dollignan could not prove it, but he felt that somehow the rights of property were invaded. He went home and draamed of Miss Haythiers; hated all the ngly successful. He spent a forthight trying to find out who this beauty was—he could never encounter again. At last he heard of her, in this way, a lawyer's clerk paid him a little visit and commenced a little scition ngainst him in the name of Miss Haythorn, for insulting her in a railway station.

The young gentleman was shocked, enclavanced to soften he lawyer's clerk; that machine did not thoroughly comprehend the meauling of the term. The lady's name however, was at last revealed by that untoward incident; from her name to her address was but a short step; and the same day our crest-fallen hero lay in wait at her door—and many a succeeding day without offect. But one fine afternoon, she issued forth offect. But one fine afternoon, she issued forth quite naturally, as if she did it every day, and walked, briskly on the nearest Parade. Dolignan did the same, he mer and passed her many times on the Parade, and searched for pity in her eyes, but found heither look nor, recognition, nor any other sentiment; for all this she walked and walked, till all the uther promensiders were tired and gone—then her culprit summoned resolution, and taking off his hat, with his voice tramulous for the first time, lessught permission to address her.—

She stooped, blushed, and neither acknowledged or disowned his acquaintance. He blushed, stamps mered out how ashamed he was, how he deserved o be punished; how he was punished, how little she knew how unhappy he was; nad concluded by begging her not to let all the world knew the disgrace of a man, who was already mortified enough by the loss of her acquaintance. She asked an explanation; he told her the action had been comexplanation; he told her the action had been com-menced in her name; she gently shrugged her shoulders and said. "How stupid they are." Em-boldened by this, he begged to know whether or not a life of distant unpretending devotion would, after the lapse of years, erase the memory of his madness—his crime! "She did not know—!" "She did not know—!"

"She must now bid him adicu, as she had some preparations to make for a ball in the Crescent, where everybody was to be." They parted, and Dolignan determined to be at the ball, where everybody was to be. He was there, and after some time he obtained an introduction to Miss Haythern, and he danced with her. Her manner was gracious. With the wonderful tact of her sex, she seemed to have commenced the acquaintance that evening. That pight, for the first time Dolignan was in love. I will spare the reader all a lover's arts, by succeeding in dining where she dined, in dancing where she danced, in overtaking her by accident when she rode. His devotion followed her even to church, where our dragoon was rewarded by learning there is a world where they neither poke nor smoke—the two capital was rewarded by learning there is a world where they neither poke nor smoke—the two capital abominations of this one.

He made acquaintance with her uncle, who liked him; and he saw at last with joy, that her eye loved to dwell upon him, when she thought he did not observe her.

It was three months after the Box Tunnel, that Capt. Dolignan called one day upon Capt. Haythorn, R. N., whom he had met twice in his life, and alightly propitiated him by violent listening to a cutting out expedition; he called, and in the usual way asked permission to pay his addresses to his daughter. The worthy Captain straightway began doing quarter-deck, when suddenly he was summoned from the apartment by a mysterious message. On his return he announced, with a total change of voice, that "it was all right, and his visitor might run along side as soon as he choose." My reader has divined the truth; this nuttical commander, terrible to the foe, was in complete and happy subjugation to his daughter, our heroine.

Miscellany. PRILOSOPHY of RAIS .- To understand the phllesophy of this beautiful and often sublime phenomenon, so often witnessed since the creation of the world, and so essential to the very existence of plants and animals, a few facts derived from servation and a long train of experiments must be remembered: 1. Were the atmosphere everywhere, at all times, of a uniform temperature, we should never have any rain, or hall, or snow. The water sh-sorbed by it in evaporation from the sea and the sarth's surface, would dessend in an imperceptiearth's surface, would dessend in an imperceptible vapor, or cease to be absorbed by the airwhen it was once fully saturated.

2. The absorbing power of the atmosphere, and consequently its capacity to retain humidity,
is proportionately greater in warm than sold air.

The air nearer the surface of the earth is warmer than it is in the region of the clouds. The higher we ascend from the earth, the colder do we find the atmosphere. Hence the perpetual anow on very high mountains in the hettest snow on very high mountains in the hottest limate. Now, when, from continued evaporation, the Now, when, from continued evaporation, the air is highly asturated with vapor, though it be invisible and the sky cloudless, its temperature is suddenly reduced by cold currents descending from above, or rushing from a higher to a cooler latitude, its capacity to retain moteture is diminished, clouds, are formed, and the result is rain. Air condenses, as it cools, and, like a sponge filled with water and compressed, pours out the water which its diminished capacity cannot hold. How singular, yet how simple, the not hold. How singular, yet how simple, the philosophy of rain? What but Omnicciance could have devised such an arrangement for watering the earth?—New York Observer.

PLORENCE NIGHTINGALE AND MARY PATTER. The following is one of the new passages introduced by Mr. Ryerett into his oration on Washington, as recently delivered at Cambridge, Mass.: "Witness that heroic, aye that angelic vestal, Florence Nightingals, who beneath the eyes of admiring Europe and admiring Asia, walked, with screen unconcern, for more than a twelvemonth, the pestilential wards of a hospital; witness our not less heroic countrywoman; Mary Paters and the screen was the screen with the screen was the sc to, whose name is hardly known to the public, the wife of a merchant-ship master, who, far off on the lonely Pacific, with ne eye to witness and no voice to cheer her, when her husband was ta-ken down by illness, now tended him in his cabin, "That is much the same thing; will you be all no voice to cheer her, when her husband was tavised by ma?"
"If you will advise me."
"Speak to nib one of this, and send White the £3 that he may think you have lost the bet."
"That is hird, when I won it !"
"Do it, for all that, sir."

Let the disbelievers in human perfectibility that the tilt descend enoughle of a blush did rew, arrested the mutinous chief mate, who was his forlorn vessel; took her observations every day with the sextsut; laid down the ship's course on chart, cheered and encouraged the desponding arew, arrested the mutinous chief mate, who was for creeping into the nearest port, and who, on the score of seamanship alone, was not worthy to kiss the dust beneath the feet of the lion-heated little woman; and who, poor young wife as she was, hardly itwenty years of age, and already overshadowed with the sacred primal sorrow of her sex, yet with a strong will and a stout heart, steered her husband's yessel, through storm and steered her husband's vessel, through storm and through calm, from Cape Horn to San Francisco." THE LOVE OF CHILDRES.—Tell me not of the trim, precisely arranged homes where there are no children, "where," as the Germans have it, "the fly-traps always hang straight on the wall;" tall me not of the never disturbed nights and days of the tranquil, unauxious hearts where children are not; I care not for these things. God sends children for another purpose than merely to keep up the race—to enlarge our hearts, to make us unreligh and full of kindly sympathies and affections; to give our souls higher aims, to call out all our faculties to extended enterprise and exertion; to bring round our fireside bright faces and happy smiles, and loving, tender hearts. My soul blesses the Great Father every day, that He has gladdened the earth with little children .-

THE Louisville Journal says that all the old lumber of Henry Clay's home at Ashland has been sold to Wm. S. Rand, of Maysville, Ky., a democrat, for the manufacture of canes, boxes, Shame upon the paltry spirit that desecrates the home of the "old man elequent." It should stand a Mecca for the patriotism of the world, until time and the elements had done their worst. As it is, the hand of a degenerate son of Mr. Clay, traffics on the greatness of his father, and commits an act of vandalism disgraceful to the age. Shame upon him! GEN. WALKER, the Slavery Propagandist in Nicaragua, is represented to be a selfish, hardhearted tyrant, with a good deal of courage. He did not even visit a party of his victims who ar- . rived at New York in the Wabash, many of whom were wounded and sick-twenty-six of whom were sent to Bellevue Hospital. Of course great indignation was expressed by the friends of these victims and Walker, who ceases to be a hero, because he did not succeed, will be shunned hereafter and looked upon only as a selfish, hard-hearted Slavery Propagandist.

An interesting marriage has taken place recently in Paris: that of Mile. Estelle Belot, sister of the young and brave officer who perished among the Arctic snews; on the second expedition in search of Franklin. The lady's bridegroom is employed as Superintendent of Railroads, and has a salary of from 12,000 to 15,000 francs; while she also brings a pretty dower—a sum subscribed by French and English friends for Lt. Belot's family—added to gifts from Lady Franklin. Thus the premature death of a young and gallant sailor becomes the means of securing those he loved from want. loved from want.

UNFOUNDED REPORT.—The report that Senator Cameron would support Wm. F. Packer for Governor is not correct. It is true that the families are connected by marriage, and the family has always been friendly to Gen. Cameron-but the great'question of Free Territories over-rides all relationship and friendly feeling in this contestand Gen. Cameron will be found in the front rank in support of Judge Wilmot for Gover-

CALARITY OF THE ST. LAWRENCE BIVER.-The steamer Montreal, having on board between 500 and 600 passengers, among whom were a large number of Scotch emigrants, was burned a few miles above Quebes on Saturday week, resulting in a frightful loss of life.
