wit and Jumor. - From the Misseuri Journal of Bluentian BOARDING ROUND. At sixteen, with a valuant heart, The task I did commence, "In task I did commence, "In task young ideas how to shoot" The gerns of common sense: Ah, yes! a mightly task was that, that very soots! Boths That It was not a simple one To go a "boarding round."

·通信·公司基础公司 (1777年)

The times work-different thou from now, The folks were different too; The "master" path with honor bright Quite thickly they did strue; And questions grave, and problems deep, That did their brains confound, They always would be sure to keep Till be came "boarding round."

Fathers would talk of politics, Or church affairs provides. Or church affairs propose, And if my views were not like theirs, A warm dispute arose. A warm dispute area.

Aid some old "posers," sly and wise,
Did oftentimes propound.

Questions that sorely puzzled sia,
When I went "boarding round."

The methers talked of rude young girls, Of memons, books, and boys;
But always tried their best to add Unsto my earthly joys;
For, did I catch the slightest cold, Or hourse my voice should sound, I got a doe of catnip tea (!)
When I went "boarding round." The girls would talk of everythingparties, rides and calls; presents and the holidays, beaux and Christmas balls

Some grave, some gay and misch (These last I with were drowned For sticking pins into my bed.) When I came "boarding round." Long wining evenings then were passe. With laughing, jesting Joy; Nor did good apples, cider, nata, The least that fun destroy; Or, if a singing-school were near, We'd go, and I'll be bound. I've often sung till I was houre, When I was "boarding round."

The dinner-basket, every noon, The dinner-baskel, every noon, My willing hand did greet,
And scarcely ever failed to bring.
He something good to eat;
Mince pies were full of misins then,
Doughnuts were large and round;
Jan's nech cakes I have not had dince I quit "boarding round."

But now those pleasant days are gone, Life's sunny spring' time's past; The boys I taught have, one by one, Into the world been cast; My locks are growing thin and gray, I'll soon be under ground; Then I'll street, and not till then, About the "boarding round."

Tit was formerly the custom in almost all parts of the country, for the teacher of a district school to get a part of his pay by "boarding round;" that is, by boarding to each family successively for a period of time proportioned to the number of children therein, that attended than period.

The Trick I Played upon my Wife and I had an aunt coming to visit me, for the first time since my marriage, and I don't know what evil genius prompted the wickedness (I acknowledge with tears in my eyes that it was such,) which I pepertrated towards my wife and my abcient relative.

"My dear," said I to my wife, on the day b fore my aunt's arrival, "you know aunt Mary is is coming to-morrow; well, I forgot to mention a rather annoying circumstance with regard to her. She's very dear, and although she can't hear my voice, to which she is accustomed, in its ordinary tones, yet you will be obliged to speak extremely loud in order to be heard. It will be rather inconvenient, but I know you will do everything in your power to make her slay agreeable,"

Mrs. S. appounced her-determination to make herself heard, if possible.

I then went to John Thomas, who loves a joke as well as any person I know of, told him to be at my house at 6 P. M., on the following to be at my house at 6 P. M., on the following evening, and felt comparatively happy.

I went to the railroad station with a carriage the next evening, and when I was on my may home with my aunt, I said, "My dear aunt, there is one rather annoying infirmity that Amelia has been added in the safe of Mestra. WHO STOLE THE BIRD'S NEST! The following lines have we hope been read and jets by every boy in the country, but lest even one boy has failed to see them, and also because they are pretty enough to bear even a hundreth perusal, we make room for them here, omitting the repetition of the question sefore each answer, originally written. To whit! to whit! to whee! Will you listen to me! Who stole four eggs I laid And the nice nest I made!

Bobalink! Bobalink! Now what do you think? Who stole a nest away From the plum tree to-day? Not I, said the cow, moo-oo! Such a thing I'd never do,
I gave you a wisp of hay,
Aud did not take your nest away,
Not I, said the cow, mone-oo!
Such a thing I'd never do. Not I, said the dog, bow-wow! I wouldn't be so mean, I vow; I gave the hairs the nest to make, But the nest I didn't take.

Not I, said the sheep; oh! no, I wouldn't treat a bird so; I gave the wool the nest to line, But the nest was none of mine. Bus, bus! said the sheep, oh! no, I wouldn't treat a poor bird so— Cluck, cluck, said the hen, Don's ask me again. Why I haven't a chick Would do such a trick. We all gave her a feather, And she wore them together; I'd accorn to intrude On her and her broad. Chirra-whirri Chirra-whirri

We'll make a great stir, Let us find out his name And all cry for shame. I would not rob a bird, Said little Mary Green; I think I never heard Of anything so mean. Tis very cruel, too, Said little Alice Neal, I wonder if he knew How had the bird would feel?

A little boy hung down his head And went and hid behind the bed; For he stole that pritty nest From poor lighte yellow-breast; And he selt so tall of shame, He didn't like to tell his name.

ACCOMMODATION FOR HORSES. Nor that the Winter is approaching, we have a few words to speak in behalf of that noblest, and most abused of our domestic animals, the horse. That sign, which used to hang out upon country taverus of the old school, "Accommodation for THE IMPERIAL DEPURATIVE.

The Great Remedy of the Nineteenth the public, at least in the latter part of its prothe public, at least in the latter part of its promiss. The accommodation for the horse was genulous diseases, Totter, White Sweiting, Malignant crally a-narrow stall, in an over stocked stable, linears and all diseases originating in an unit plank-floor, and a mere apology for a bed of straw. Here, after a long day's work upon the road, old Dobbin was expected to refresh his weary limbs. The thing was impracticable in that atmosphere, foul with the breath of twenty other tired horses, and with the effluvia of ammonia coming up from the saturated floors; and upon those hard planks, where the weight of the horse made a firm pressure upon the wearied muscles, as he lay down to sleep. There was no chance for that relaxation of the muscle, which is as necessory to the brute, as to the man, At home, the horse was little better off, exceptthat the stable was not full of horses, and he had a better atmosphere to breathe. There was the same hard bed, and same pungent small from the fitby floors. Not one horse in a hundred is properly accommodated in the Winter. In the Summer when turned out to pasture, they resume their natural habits in some measure, and regain this atmosphere and hed. The Lorse, in his native

Philadelphia, July 18, 75 — 20-46. can not be entirely remedied. Nature gives us the needful hints, if we will but heed her voice. The horse can have as pure wholesome air in: the barn, as he has upon the prairie, without any exposure to the keen winds and storms that assail him in his natural state. Barns are generally constructed, without any attention being paid to ventilation. The walls are nearly tight, and not unfrequently the supply of hay is stored in themows over the stables, so that all the foul oders, escaping from the lungs and bowels of the borse are absorbed by the bay, until it becomes unfit for food. He is compelled to breathe over, many times, this foul air, and finds no relief except when he is taken out of the stable. Is it any wonder, that horses become diseased under this treatment, and die prematurely ?

A barn should be constructed with ventilators, of a size corresponding to the number of animals it is designed to accommodate, so that the air will be changed as fust as it is breathed. This can be done so that the mimals will not be exposed to currents, or suffer from any undue degree of cold.

Again, we can propers a bed in the stable quite as comfortable, as any the horse finds in his grassy pastures. The best bedding we have ever found for a horse, is a cont of dry peat, muck or sods, covered with straw. It should be a foot thick, and the drier the better. This makes a soft warm bed, and while it accommodates the horse in the best manner, it farnishes in the course of the year an enormous quantity of manure. The straw, and the solid forces are removed every morning, and all the liquid is immediately absorbed. The stall should be at least six feet wide, and about a half cord of muck will make a good bed. This will hast nearly two weeks before it becomes so anturated as to emit the smell of ammonia. A horse stable should always be as sweet as a parlor, and it is a constant waste for a man ever to have it otherwise. Of course, it requires more labor to furnish a herse with these accommolations, but we know from our own practice of areral years, that the labor is abandantly paid for, not only in the health of ther horse, but in the manure made by this process. We are confident that no farmer, who adopts this plan and learns its advantages, will ever abandon it.

We have lately seen stables constructed with deep cemented pits under the horse, instead of
