BY CLARA AUGUSTI, Gop's blessing rest upon the man Who plows the bounteous land, And atrews the yellow grain breadcast With free, ungrunding hand! Who makes the gallant moorland bloom With wheat and solden corn. The vergant grass to spring at will, Where lurks the worthless thorn.

G, bless his toll with full success Let soft and gentle rains Revive his dusty pasteres, hills, And send the sunshine down to warm The frosty breast of earth, That crimson wealth of clover blooms May spring to odorous tirth :

A puble, independent life: Fraught but with honest gains; Wrung not from pale faced widowed ones, Or orphans hunger pains: Honest and fearless, free and glad, A very prince is he-At parce with Gob, in kye with truth, With meu in harmony.

Il is lot is cast in Nature's fanes, Benach a lucky star! What is't to him that railroad stocks Are quoted huder par? The banks may spilt, ennais bretk, up, And mining sections fail-Ilo's left to him his widespread fields, Il is threshing floors and fialts!

His children throng about his knees,

When gloaming the creeps on-And hang around his sturdy neek To kies him, one by one; The ruddlest cheeks and sweetest lips, The brightest eyes are theles. The arsets smile in all the town The farmer's Max wears.

Gop bless the farmer! bless him well!-A royal life he owns! Ile reads his love from mountain height, Ilis corrections from the atones; Ilis corrections are Nature's wilds And gorgeous summer atles; The vast cathedral where he prays is lieuven's arched canopies!

CHAPTER IV. HA! HA!!! HA!!! HA!!!! To say that Gongulphus was angry would be but an indifferent statement of the truth. He was in rage. He couldn't contain himself, and was in rage. He could a consequently boiled over in torrents that formed puddles of wrath at his feet. He foamed, raved, ripped and tore-stamped, rolled, kicked and roared. At last, seising a battering ram by the horns, he made a furious push at the guilty pair.

CHAPTER V. THE CHRONONBOTOROLOGICAL VENGEARCE OF THE GRAND DUKK OF THE ADENCERRAGES. "Die !" shrieked Gengulphus, as he twirled the fenrfal instrument above, their heads—but alas! in its swift descent it came in contact with Baron de Boosey's pipe, and glancing at right angle's, clove asunder the massive door leading to the Royfal Menagerie !! Brimstone and torpedoas! thundered Gengulphus—but he was too late. Ere he could again raise the huge weapon, a flores de-monical howl ran through the roum, and the next moment au infuriated griszly Codish ran [mad]y forth from the demolabel door and buried its deadly fasfgs in the soat of the mighty Gengul-huw' idexpressibles | He uttered a sharp or pain—made one desperste effort to shake of the inonster—and thon fell to the floor, atlend as June bug in January.
