AUTUMN DAYS. When the days are growing shorter, And the Winner drawth nigh, And the Stinu whods of Antumn Hunt the flight clouds through the sky; And the Stinu whods of Antumn Hunt the flight clouds through the sky; And the merry Summer bird, With his piping song of gladeses. In the wild wad is not heard; When the merulens cool and treaty, Usher in the pleasant days, And the earth with teeming harvests. To its Maker giveth praise; Then there cames to me no sedness. As the summer glides away, For I love the firsty morning. Why should we mourn the Summer?

Do not all things pass away?
And there is nothing beautiful
But griweth from decay.
And there is nothing true and good
llut springs from something fled:

THE POULTRY YARD.

Now is the time to push along the poultry.-Don't wait till a week or two before Thanksgiving. or Christmas to begin to food the turkeys, gerse, ducks or chickens, but treat them generously were, when they are making growth, and they will double their weight by the holidays. Gresshoppers, the past season, are now about done with. The Turkies and chickens have had a good time with them, and grasshopper bone and muscle have been turned into those of the poultry with decided advantage to them, and saving to the grain bins .--If there be no harry to eat the fowls, or take them to market, builed potatoes, boets and carrole, may be given to them with any sort of grain meal you happen to have, or can make-the mere bran of any grain, is good for nothing, only scouring them. This gives them growth, but not so much fat as if the grain, or most be given them mostly. We do not believe in confiring poultry at this ? beary storms come on, it will do, provided they be kept clean, and have plenty of good air, and rholesome food. If they have the habit of rousting on trees-which they oftentimes get in warm weather, and which is very wholesome for themgood, but positive injury for a turkey or chicken to get wet in a cold rain, and they should not be exposed to it. In addition to generous feeding now promoting their growth, it shoots out their second growth of feathers to maturity-for nowld bird is good to eat while moulting, or a young one palatable while pushing out its second growth AE best article in the world for of fostners, which all young ones do in the Pall raising WillEAT, is Lecinau's Super-Phos-of the year. Transferred to the vacant division, and from the next division to the one just emptied, and so on. These long boxes can be set one above the other -first against the wall, and then another tier far enough from the first, to allow a good passage way between. The lower box of each tier should be raised, at least a foot from the ground, by placing blocks underneath. With boxes thus arranged, one can be taken out at arrine for sorting over, which should be done quite frequently. PATTERING ANIMALS.—Whatever may be the fued given, two indispensables must be observed. namely, cleanliners both of unitnal and food, and regularity. We have known half the value of food wasted, by filth and discomfort,-worse than throwing away cash; and we know animals to waste more flesh by frotting long for an expected menl, than the food restored.

PACEING BUTTER FOR WINTER USE,-Take wooden eask, or half barrel, fill about half full o cold water, then put in, salt sufficient to make a strong brine. Let it stand a day or two to settle and skim off what rises on the top. Work the batter thoroughly in rolls of from a pound and a half to two pounds, put them in the cask, placing a weight on them to keep them under the brine. Butter put down in this way in May will keep
