GOING & HUNDRED BETTER; OR, WHICH HAND TAKES THE POT. A GANBLING TRIAL IN CALIFORNIA.

There is such a place as "Deadwood" in California. A friend of ours passed through the town the other day, but stopped long enough to witness a trial before the chief officer of the law, vulgarly called a Justice of the Peace.

The case was "Hanks ps. Breese," and the facts were :

First - That the parties had violated the law by playing "poker" on the Sabbath. [It is perhaps, proper to state that the good folks of ments, Branch Fipes and Counting First-That the parties had violated the law Deadwood had not seen the Supreme Court decisions.)

Second-That Breese played very 'low down' or in other words, chested plaintiff. Third-That the game broke up in a row, the parties being arrested by the Justice, who happened to be present.

It was an important case. Both parties were well known, and had hosts of friends. The defendant, through his attorney, a sharp little man, demand a jury. The people of Deadwood never go to a trial without a jury. . The legal preliminaries having been properly arranged, the case was called. Twelve of the best men in the locality formed the jary. The attorneys were big with the event | Can of the hour. At length an odd looking geni- THOMAS R. BANNAN, Attorney at us, named Stephen Lick, was placed on the stand by the prosecution. The case proceeded. "You said you were present during the game between the parties. Did we so understand you, Mr. Lick ?" The witness nodded in the affirmative.

"Did you observe the progress of the game with any interest?" "I reckon I did-licker was pendin' on it."

"What was the amount at stake, at the time the row occurred ?"

"Well the ante was two bits, and Lem Hanks bet a half on his little par. Then Bill he went

"Never mind the details," interrupted the lawyer, impatiently, "answer my question." "That's what I'm going to do," replied the witness, drawing a large black plug of tobacco from his pocket.

"You see when Lem dropped his half on the pot, Bill kivered it with a big dollar, 'cause I stood just whar I could see that he helt a little par, too. Lem he then took a drink and 'peared sort o' keerless-----" "Come, come," again interrupted the lawyer, "tell us the amount of money at stake at tto time the quarrel commenced." "Steve," said the Judge familiarly, "you say that when Bill Breese shoved up his dollar.

Lem Hanks took a snifter and 'peared sort' keerless. What did he do then!"

"Why he seed Bill and lifted him two scads. Bill he 'peared a little uneissy, but' raised Lein a five.' Lem he tuck another drink and said the game was gettin' interestin,' at the same Norwegian. [August 3, '57] 32-6m Bill he 'peared a little uneasy, but raised Lem time shaking a ten dollar piece out on the same pot. Bill he then said, 'Lem, you kinder anit me,' and called out 'twonty better,' Then -----"

"Mr. Constable," followed the Judge, who was deeply interested in the witness' story, "do your duty." Then fixing his eyes upon the witness, he asked : "Steve, my boy, when Bill plunged his thirty better, what did Lem come up with ?' "Why Lem he lifted him a cool fifty."

The Judge collapsed. "Gentlemen of the Jury, that's so, for I was thar, and seen Lem do it." By one of the Jury: "What did Bill do then ?"

"Bill he took another look at his hand, and theu got down and scratched his foot again. When he came up, he said to me, said he. 'Steve, lend me a hundred dollars.' Says I 'what fur?' He said, 'to clean out Lem Hunks.' I said, 'it can't be did on your par of juces, for he's got bully sixes.' 'Good thing,' says he, giving me a wink. "Kiver his pile, and I. F. VOORHIES & CO. I'll call him.' I----

"Never mind what you did," said the lawyer for defendant, "that has nothing to do with the merits of the case."

The Judge gave the lawyer a terrible look. Then, turning to the witness, he said, "Steve, if the Court recollects herself, then you came up with the spondulicks, and Bill Breese tuck down Lem's pile."

This announcement was followed by mur murs of dissatisfaction. The attorney for the plaintiff was the first to speak.

"Now, if your honor pleases," said he, "I would like to ask one question. How comes it that the defendant got that money, if he only had a pair of duces against my client's Bixes ?"

"Yes," said several members of the jury, "how could that happen ?"

"Bill did have juces fust-I'll swear to that," resumed the witness, "but somehow when i come to the last, he was stronger." The lawyers, thinking be was about to continue the story to an endless length, requested him to be brief. Taking a fresh "chew,"

Steve said : "The way of it was this: when I kivered
