Miners' Journal. POTTSVILLE, PA. OUR CURRENCY.

One of the papers in this County in an article on this subject, remarks." Every one admits that currency is a nutsence, and if it would be entirely superceded by a besaliful par bank note medium, nn one would complain." Now on the lat of July we had in this community a "beautiful" par bank note medium, effected by the redemption of the under par Pennsylvania bank notes by the Philadelphia and par banks of the country. 'The community was delighted, and none were heard to complain but the under par banks and note shavers. The late city redemption system demonstrated perfectly to the people, the important effeet which anterally will result, and exhibited people have been "shaved" to a pretty lively plainly, the fact that it is the only way whereby tune, long enough. They must protect themselves. ... we can obtain a "beautiful" bank note medium It is a familiar fact that banks derive their profits from the circulation of their notes, and from deposite, and no one will deny that the par system gives to every bank its bosa fide circulation and deposite, while under a system of partial city rethree more sumbers of Peterson & Brathers' chesp demption, the under par country banks usurp the odition of Sir Walter Scott's Novels. ple. We therefore, again express the opinion that all of the country banks should go out of the Philadelphia exchanges, in order that each bank may retain its legitimate circulation and denosite. And if they should all go out, we apprehend that the present under par banks would growl "in their sleeves" as much as ever, for it would place all of country bank notes at their counters, as the paper | 27 WEDNERDAT, 4 51 7 21 remain unimpaired, as it is not probable that they Thermometrical Record for the Wes would make any distinction between country bank notes. All would then still share alike in the city circulation.

The plea advanced by our cotemporary that the par country banks hold on to the city redemption to avoid an exposure of weakness, is strong evi dence of great weakness on its part. Again it says,"It is feared that all the country banks it the State will join in refusing to redeem in the city." Who fears? Not the city banks! And if all the country banks go "out," according to out contemporary's argument it will be evidence of strength in them to do so. But how are the "patted officers" to survive the deep mortification of surrendering their cherished system or "mistaken pride," as our contemporary terms it? Have courses, gentlemen ; you will certainly receive the sympathy of the "patters" and the whole com- fit of his health, which has been impaired by unmunity. Again our contemporary remarks, "It is folly to attempt to get clear of depreciated bank notes while bank notes are at all tolerated." Already we have refuted this argument by proving that depreciated bank notes were nearly banished from circulation, under the late city redemption sys tem. We think we are correct when we state that previous to the inauguration of that system, three-fourths of the circulating medium of this Region consisted of depreciated bank notes, and if we exclude the notes of the Miners' Bank which were at par, the amount would reach nine-ienths. When the city redemption system crased on the lat of July, not above one tonth of our circulating bank note currency was under par, and that was growing by degrees small and beautiful- health-giving, but an intelligent writer says that " T.S. Hoffm only reasonable objection that the under par banks | Court. have to a law for city redemption is, that of being obliged to keep a fund in two places, each to be sufficient for the redemption of their notes. This seems to carry on its face a degree of oppression and partiality. In fact however, the plea is fallacious, for by reference to the statements of the ander par banks, it will be perceived that their city balances are quite equal to that of the par banks. How did the under par banks redeam their notes when presented at their counters by the Philadelphia banks? At first they indignantly refused to pay in drafts on the city ; but "planked down" the sein, according to their previous arguments against holding funds in two places to redeem their notes, and professions that they were ready cheerfally, to redeem at their counters in coin. But very soon, the country banks found is more convenient and less expensive to them, to give drafts on the city for their notes, and it was equally more convenient and feas expensive for the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank to take them. Thus the under par banks by their own acts establish their inconsistency, and refute their own arguments. Yet they cry, "Persocution ! Persecation by the Philadelphia banks !"

BT THE BARD OF TOWTH MALL

There's a town upon the Lehigh, And we'd make it known to fame, Were it not that we have reasons for not calling it by hame.

In that pleasant lown residing, Is a man of shrin we write, Who is very sharp in trading, Aud, in making bargains, tight.

He's a dealer in refreshments-

Such as porter, ale and beer-And with funcious clams and system Will a hungry patron cheer.

He was owner of a wagnn, Which was very much defaced,

So he cont it to a painter, And 'two painted to his taste,

At a cost of many dollars, Which the oyater dealer poid When the wagon was delivered In its glossy suit strayed.

It was used in daily service-Being ever on the drive-Murb exposed to wind and weather Till the yours had numbered firs:

Then the point, which on the wagon,

Had been shining, bright and lair, From its ervice and exposure Showed the marks of wear and tear;

To the painter once again, And by letter boldly told him That his painting had been in vain,

For it only cracked and fided, And for this he made complaint, As he knew the artiul painter Used no oil to mix his paint;

And as he had kept the dil out From his paint, with base intent, He must do the wagon over, And he musto's charge a cent.

Then the painter sent sq answer, And he said I do not know, Whether oil I used or not, sir, As it happened king ago;

But there's something I remember-And 'is this: I bought of you, While the wagon I was mainling, What you called an opter stew;

But no butter was there in it,

And, your seifsbuess to toil, y secount for lack of butter Against yours for lack of oil

I shall file, in honest officet, And a jury then shall say, Who, in point of fact, is debior, And how much be ought to pay.

When the miser got this answer, Like a tiger he did grin, For he badn't made expenses On the fint he tried to skin.

There are very many sharpers Who resort to tricks as smail, When they might, in buying clothing, At the famous Tower Hall, Save enough to make them happy ; And, although the sons pi toll. They could paint the brightest pictures-Nover leaving out the cit.
