AGGRESSION.

fal.

Our Southern friends have a curious idea of the exact import of this word. If the North which is the South's superior in population, in wealth, in the aggregate value of its productions, and in infinence on the progress and welfare of mankind-springing from the absence of Slavery-evinces a disposition to defend its rights in or out of the National territories, on or off the floor of Congress, it is aggression. The history of every compromise which Freedom has made with Slavery, during our National existence, exhibits but one result-gain to the latter, by the aid of the "dough-face" Democracy of the North. No aggression there! Not as the South defines the word. To break a as meritorious as it is cheap. Published by M. It is well for the North to duly appreciate this state of affairs, preparatory to the great contest next year, for Free Labor will then be called upon to assert and manfully maintain its rights against the insidicus encroach ments of Slavery, or ignobly surrender through baseless fear, as in years past. The South is acting far from wisely. It dare not dissolve the Union. Its own interests will not sanction such a course. It is dependent upon the North for protection, for goods, for capital, for existence itself. Out of the Union, servile insurrection and starvation would stare it in the face. Its most prominent men admit that it is unprepared for disunion. With slavery it always will be. The South is vise in alienating from it its former faith-

This Magazine is in every respect, progress. Mrs. Frants sunk to the ground a duson times, in a distance of between one and two miles, yet she clong to and protected her babe, with the fervor which characterises a mother's lave. At last Mrs. Frants, overcome by cold and fatigue, sould proceed no further. The young man placed her and four of the children on the ground, in as shelterad a position as he could find; picked up the remaining child, a boy, is his arms, and with his wife, proceeded home as rapidly as possible. On reaching home, he informed his friends of the occurrence, and they started in search of the unfortunate sufferers. When discovered, Mrs. Frants and the children, wers insensible. The mother was lying on her back, with her babe pressed tightly to her bosom, while her clothing was frogirl, while attempting evidently, to crawling the hill, had slipped; her clothing was stripped from her persop, and she was found exposed and frozen to the ground. The children were taken to a place of shelter ; but Airs. Frants was not removed until a wagon had been procured. The first inquiry from her lips when restored to conscious ness, was for her children. The boy first taken some doubt of the recovery of the other children. What the little family suffered in the long hours of that Saturda Wafternoon and night, exposed to the peltings of a pililess storm, and to the chilling with the nearest house miles away, and their ty for her poor children, our readers can imagine.

ful adherents, by driving the entire North to the wall. It will go too far if it is not careful. Patience often ceases to be a virtue.

The North American in an article on the foolish, aggressive policy of the South, concludes as follows: "But the worst and most alarming step in this at-tempt of the democracy to inment dissension till they hall have forced a sectional issue, wo find taken in their latest attitude. They now recard with indifference or cover with contempt even, their formest and most long triad friends at the north-men who have as rificed for them much of rive position and esterm at home-be-cause they cannot come up to the last extreme version of democratic law. Mr. McEse. M. C. from Mississippi, in a redent. devalse. expressed great contempt for the conservatism and friendship shown in the Boston Uni-on meeting. The resolutions adopted, the said. were gloomy generalities, and not one of them attacked the anti-playery sectioners. Its chairman, the veneralide Lavi Lincoln, expressed opinions shared in by the fe-publicans. Edward Everett, though a great and good man, never hal sund sentiments on the slavery ques-tion. Kren the super-serviceable Caleb Cushing, from alwaye do from a renerging to former principles-said piced Mr. Lincoln when the former bad uitered anti-slavery sentiments. The Bichmoud Enquirer, too, re-grads the meeting and the speakers with serves indiffer-eure, and the Charleston Mr. And uitered anti-slavery sentiments. The Bichmoud Enquirer, too, re-grads the meeting and the speakers with serves indiffer-eure, and the Charleston Mr. And we genes ao far in their backs on emitment frieds when have genes ao far in the serves and subment for the serves main fightered and thered and the Charleston Mr. And democracy nowhere reprose the ten for thus taraing the sets on emitment frieds when have genes ao far in the sets on emitment for the sets meeting far in the sets on emitment for the sets on emitment for the set on endifferclades as follows : gards the incerting and the speakers with certain utilities enree, and the Charleston Mercary with open soon. And democracy nowhere reprotes them for thus turning their backs on emittent, friends who have gone so far in their championship of southern interests as to have lost larcely in the affections of their countrymen at "home. "It seems, then, that it is required of Mexers, Lincoln, Events and Cushing, and Inferentially of all northern-suring the south of their fraternal regard and their re-spect for their rights and fedings, but also by publicly renouncing their anti-slavery sentiments!" The sub-stance of this isst utarse, attered by southern and ac-quiesced in by northern democracy, is that no man is worthy the confidence of the south, of the nation, un-less be shall advocate all the previous claims of slavery, togeher with this new one of its protection by our gov-ernmont in the territories and shall also publicly dis-claim all hostility to that institution, in and by itself considered. Now as the ladders of democracy will knew that almost all northerne are opposed to slavery in principle—as they know that through all our analiety to ascribe, much for the pake of peace and union, we that almost all northerners are opposed to slaver in principle—as they know that through all our anxiety to ascriftee much for the sake of pace and union, we will not surrender our convictions—it is clear that, in pustialing these stravagant downaod, they wish to drive us to the wall and array the two acctions against each other in fared and array the two acctions against each other in fared and array the two acctions against more than the same and array the two acctions against each other in fared and array the two acctions against ing. But we do ask our conthern friends, of whatever party, not to subserve the larse ends of these men who are 'saving the Union' after so strange a fashion. It is pain accough for us to know that the nation is burdened with an hereditary ovli—an evil with which we have no right to medials, and for which, if we had such right, we could, probably; devise no remedy. It is sarrifice enough for us to bare patiently allowed this is stitution for many years to overrida sil other interasts, and sway almost the whole section of the government. To ask as now to make a whole burnt offering of our principles— to require of us, and or pain of being called sectional, not obly to refrain from issging, on suitable occusien, that we think this system wrong, but to doclare that we think it right, hoursed of God and buscheent for man—is not this—ruw une a coloquini but expressive phrase—is not this ruw uning the mourners!"

Some millions, here, in Freedom's land, Iler mandates all obey; And those are branded. "Not genteel!" Who do not own her sway. She draws the patterns for the garbs Our men of fashion wear;

She fixes, tro, the style of cut For whiskers and for hair; And no moustache can grace a face To win a ladv's smile, Unless 'dis straichtened out or curled In Fashion's latest style. Her lady subjects must on hoops Spread out their crinoline.

And swoop the pavemonts, when they walk, With silks or sating fine. Their waists must be genteel in size Though stays and strings may kill," Because the fettered longs with air Are not allowed to fill.

Some ladies' feet, with proper claims, For No. 5's may call; Yot No. 3's or 4's they wear To make their feet look small. "Tall aches from little ton corns grow," As they're been made to feel ! But corns don't go against their grain. If they can look genteel.

Their shoes and slippers must be thin, For Eastion so decrees. For Fashion so decrees, Though thicker shoes would save their bealth, And save them doctor's fees.

They sacrifice their health and wealth Der holish pride alona-O, blest the hoar when Common Secse Shall Fashion's queen dethrone!
