WHAT I BEGIN TO BELIEVE.—"Bubbles," of the California Golden Era, furnishes that paper, under the head of "Notes and Cogitations," with the following:

I begin to believe that, now-a-days, money makes the man, and dress the gentleman.

I begin to believe that the purse is more potent than the sword and the pen together.

I begin to believe that those who sin the most during the week are the most devout upon Sundays.

I begin to believe that honesty is the best policy—to speculate with until you have gained everybody's confidence; then line your pockets.

I begin to believe in humbugging people out of their dollars. It is neither stealing nor begging; and those who are humbugged have themselves to blame.

I begin to believe that man was not made to enjoy life, but to keep himself miserable in the pursuit and possession of riches.

I begin to believe that the surest remedy for hard times and a tight money market is an extravagant expenditure on the part of individuals—to keep the money moving.

I begin to believe that none but knaves are qualified to hold office under Government—with the exception of a few natural born fools and lunatics.

I begin to believe that a piano forte is more necessary in a family than meat and potatoes.

I begin to believe that a boy who doesn't swear, smoke and chew tobacco, may be a very good boy, but is naturally stupid.

I begin to believe that if the devil should die, one-half of the world would be thrown out of employment.

I begin to believe that he has the most merit who makes the most noise in his own behalf; and that when Gabriel comes, not to be behind the times, he, too, will blow his own horn pretty loud.

A COLORED DISCOURSE.—"My tex, bredren and sisters, will be found in the fus chapter ob Genesis and de twenty-sebenth verse: 'An de Lord made Adam.' I tole you how he made him; he made him out ob clay, and when he get dry, he brere into him de breff ob life. He put him in de garden ob Eden, and set him in de corner ob de lot, and he told him to eat all de apples 'cepting dem in de middle ob de orchard; dem he went fur de winter apples.

"Byme by, Adam, he be lonesome. So de Lord make Ebe. I told you how he make her; he gib Adam loddilum till he get sound asleep, den he gouge a rib out ob his side and make Ebe; and he told her to eat all de apples 'cepting dem in de middle ob de orchard; dem he want for de winter apples.

"Wun day de Lord he go visiting; de debble he dress himself up in the skin ob de snake, and he find Ebe, and he tole her, 'Ebe, why for you no eat de apples in de middle ob de orchard?'

"Ebe say, 'Dem de Lord's winter apples.' But de debble says, 'I tole you for to eat them, case dey's de best apples in the orchard.' So Ebe eat de apple, and guv Adam bit; and den de'd ebble he go away.

"Byme by, de Lord, he cum home, and he call Adam; he lay low. So de Lord he call again, 'You Adam!' Adam say, 'Hea Lord!' and de Lord say, 'Who stole de winter apples?' Adam tole him, 'Don't know—Ebe, he 'spect.' So de Lord call; Ebe lay low, de Lord call again, 'You Ebe!' Ebe say, 'Hea Lord,' de Lord say, 'Who stole de winter apples?' Ebe tole him, 'Don't know—Adam, she 'spect.' So de Lord cotch 'em boff, and trow dem over de fence and he tole 'em 'Go work for your libbin.'"

THERE is a Judge, down in one of the south-eastern counties of the Reserve who is very fond of his little joke and his game of whist. A few weeks since he was hearing a case of some importance, in which several witnesses were summoned, and among them one or two notoriously good story tellers, who also knew something about "honors" and "odd tricks." Their fame had reached the ears of the Judge, but as yet he had no opportunity of having a taste of their quality, although eager to do so. The court was about taking its usual recess at noon, and in the afternoon the witnesses in question expected to testify and return home by the evening train. To their astonishment the Judge gravely rose and said: "The case on trial will not be heard this afternoon. The witnesses are bound over until to-morrow, and are this afternoon requested to meet at my house to play whist and tell stories. Mr. Sheriff, adjourn court until to-morrow."—Cleveland Herald.

AN exchange says several Irishmen were trying to decipher a notice headed "Public Sale." This notice, although written tolerably plain, could not be read by the Emeralds, and they requested us to read it for them, which of course we did.

At the conclusion one of them turned to his comrades and remarked in a very impressive tone:

"Well, be jabers, I'll never buy of a man who's so nagardly that he won't get advertisements printed; he's chated the printer, and he'd chate me as well."

Sensible, by jingo.

COULDN'T FOOL HIM.—Soon after the telegraph was put in operation on the line of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, in Martin county, one of the natives stepped into the office and wanted to know the price of pork in Cincinnati. In a few moments the answer came, with thirty-five cents for the information, but the Hoosier was too smart to be caught in that way, and replied:

"Oh, no, Mr. Telegraher, you can't fool me that way. I am not so green as you think I am. That darned tickin thing of your'n hain't been out of this room, I watched it all the time."

A ROVING young gentleman, without employment or money, concluded to take to school teaching as a means of livelihood. He accordingly applied to the trustees of a country school, when the following conversation took place:

Trustee—"What studies do you teach?"

The applicant indicated his qualifications by the following reply:

"I will teach them anything you want—from A, B, C, to a good game of draw poker."

He was immediately accepted and introduced.

"THERE won't be a darned thing this summer but politics," said Jonathan, who was discussing matters at our depot with a city friend. "I tell you that I can't meet anybody but what they're puttin in ter me 'bout the little giant, Southern niggers, old Brown the constitution and spread eagle, the rail-splitter, and a thundering lot of other names. Consarn it, why the bull frogs in the pond back of our yard, are all on a titter; bellowing out "Old Abe—Old Abe" "Illinois—Illinois"—"Put him through—chug."

"How is your husband, dear?" asked one lady of another.

"Oh, he's in a very bad state," was the reply.

"And pray, what kind of a state is he in?" persisted the other.

"In State Prison."

CHLOROFORM.—A minister in Scotland, while lately remonstrating with his congregation on the prevailing vanities of the day, rigorously condemned the vast expense of female attire, and stated that "the de'il had now iron hoops round the womcn."
