Wit and Humor.

From the Sunday Dispatch.

PADDY'S ODE TO THE FRIEND.

O might'st Friend!
It's so offinse,
Your wonting, that I name ye,
While I confess
Your real kin,
A moment to have mane ye!

That ye should see
The state o' me,
The while I stud adjacent,
I don't suppose,
Although me clothes
Was mighty clane and decent.

Ay course, ye know,
'Twas long ago
I looked as Jakes and such men,
And keeped place
An English Prince
Begotten by a Dutchman!

But by me troth
And little faith,
Wid all me Irish shyness,
I've passed the word
Wid many a lord
Much taller than your Highness!

Ah, I will—be dad,
No doubt ye had,
In token of allagiance,
A sod a cup
As ye could sup,
Among them black Canajans.

But wha'-d'-ye think
Of Christian drink,
Now tell me that, me tulip!
Or could ye bear
A shtraw
Your Highness-saw
The flavor of a julep?

And what is more,
We've got galore
Such regalees—none can bate 'em!
Ye'll bliss the day
Ye crossed the sea,
When ye sit down to ate 'em!

There's cryathers rare,
And mighty quare,
In Barnum's great Museum,
By land and water;
And Jeems and Peter
Your Highness may survey 'em!

Thim baythen chaps,
The sayers o' saps,
Wid all their curst explanse,
Just cut their tails
And left a bill
At which the purple winces.

But thin, no doubt,
Ye'll ride about
Wid Brooks and all the Aldermen;
They've little sazm,
But for expinse
There's not a pot of boulder men.

Faraundy Wud!
Has dacint blood,
And illigant morality;
And ye may swear
Our Quane's a Mayor
Will show his horsepitality!

The soldiers all
Are at his call,
Wid captains to parade 'em;
And at the laste
Ye'll get a taste
Of dimmocratic fraydom!

But plase to note
Ye're not to vote—
A privilege, by Jabus,
Ye couldn't hope,
Were ye the Pope
Until ye've got the papers!

Well, mighty Prince,
Accept these hints
Most frayly I indite 'em:
'Tis lark, indade,
If ye can thrade
As aisy as I write 'em!

And when the throne
Is all ye've won,
At which ye'er daily storin',
Wid all the care
That ye can spare,
Remember poor old Erin!

THRILLING.

Ethen Spike of the Portland Transcript, has commenced in that paper a tale which is about as sensible and true to nature—and a great deal funnier—than most of the stories which are now a days published. We extract the concluding chapter of the first number.

CHAPTER V.

"Ar that a ghost?"—Old Play.

We bev sed it was nite. And wunst for all, we say agin—

It was nite.

In the fore room of widder Tuttle's haouse sot widder Tuttle's only darter. To say that Serefeener Tuttle—sich was her name—like-wise her natur—was a lovely gal, would be several rows of apple trees away from meet-ing her case. Her raven tresses was redder 'an her nose, onexpressible eves, teeth—grinders—tothers bein tuk aout—probably ivory. Add to these the form of a syrup, and you hev one of them gals kalkerated to make a man strike his father, kick his grandmother, break the ten commandments, and poorty much everything else.

Leastwise so thought Jeems Perkings, as he nelt at her feet that cold, cold, cold nite.

"Fairest of the sects, loveliest one," implored the youth, "heer me swar?"

She said she wood.

And he sword.

"May I be whittled inter kindlin wood," swore Jeems. "may I be used for stuffin sar-sengers, if I ever—"

Heer the strain caused by kneelin was too much for Jeems onmentionables. Thar was a rip, then a tare and Jeems kerflumexed.

A dedly paller surfused the classic counte-nance of the luvly Serefeener. "O grashus!" she cried, and then swooned.

And then Jeems he swooned too.

Then—as'ef this had bin the signal—thun-der bellered, lightenin flashed, and the wind roared in the chimbly.

"Jeems—Jeems, Jeems," at length called Se-refener, in the gossamer tone of an expiring tree tode, "this are the lyin gale."

Even life at length returned to the dying youth. Fur a singl'e moment he sot on the hearth; grace fully as a Roman Senator sot foldin of his toggy did he gether his coat-tail round his tored trowses—sorrerfully did he gaze upon the face of his beloved—and solemnly he replied—

"It can't be so—it's too early!"

Hardly had he ceased speaking—or more properly skasely had he dried up—when the door opened, and——

* * * * * *

The sequel to this thrilling tail—'The Sap Biler's Doom'—will be wrote as sune as the gifted orther finds time and ideas.

NOTE by the Orther:

"Truth nocked inter the middle of the next week will rise agin—But errer bunged can't dew it."

How to get through a Crowd.—"Please make way for me, gentlemen!" exclaimed a stout, burly old man, as he was striving to ef-fect a passage through a crowd in front of the Revere, Thursday evening. "Please make way! I'm after a doctor!" "Who's sick?" inquired an incredulous individual, "My wife, sir," said the stout man, and he added some-thing in a whisper that (whatever it might have been,) induced the incredulous individu-al to incontinently draw to one side, and as the cabalistic whisper was passed along from one to another, a path for the stout man was gradually made. "It's all very well," gruffly observed a wiry little man, as he rather un-willingly gave way; "it's all very well, I dare say, but she hadn't no right to take a time like this, any way!"

How sick the wife may have been—and what the nature of her disorder—the writer knoweth not, but he does know that in less than ten minutes after the stout man was seen emerging from that crowd, and was observed quietly "touching glasses" in a neighboring saloon, with a few "jolly old souls" then and there congregated.

The Mistakes of the Press.—The most laughable case of "mistakes of the printer" is that where there had been two articles prepa-red for the paper (one concerning a sermon preached by an elderly divine, and the other about the freaks of a mad dog,) but, unfor-tunately, the foreman in placing them into the form, "mixed" them, making the follow-ing contretemps:

"The Rev. James Thompson, rector of St. Andrew's Church, preached to a large con-course of people on Sunday last. This was his last sermon. In a few weeks he will bid farewell to his congregation, as his physicians advise him to cross the Atlantic. He exhor-ted his brethren and sisters, and after the ex-piration of a devout prayer, took a whim to cut up some frantic freaks. He ran up Tim-othy street to Johnson, and down Benefit street to College. At this stage of the pro-ceedings, a couple of boys seized him, tied a tin kettle to his tail, and he again started. A great crowd collected, and, for a time there was a grand scene of noise, running and con-fusion. After some trouble, he was shot by a Jersey policeman."

TO THE PUBLIC.
A HOUSEHOLD TREASURE!
A Perfect Light!—No More Accidents!
DIAMOND OIL!
A Substitute for Fluid, and Non-Explosive.
THERE has long been a desire for a substitute for Fluid, which latter has occasioned deaths and accidents by its dangerous qualities, and the consequent loss of the deadly effects of Burning Fluid. The DIAMOND OIL is a Non-explosive Illuminator; burns freely, and affords a deeper, stronger, and brighter flame than Fluid. Should a lamp, while lighted, be overturned, it will not explode. It can be carried about the house with safety, and with a rapidity of motion, fatal to other lights. It will burn in all Fluid and Gas Generating Lamps. No one need fear this Oil. It can be used in glass or metal lamps; it does not char the wick like Fluid, and it may be remembered by the consumer, that the wick of the lamp should be raised to a height, as that used in Fluid Lamps, where it will not smoke. It possesses all the properties desired by the public, and is entirely free from the fatal effects of Fluid.
TRY IT. And its merits will recommend its admission into every Household.
The Diamond Oil Company offer an Oil, superior to any now used, which they can warrant to be a safe, brilliant and safe Light, at a price within the means of every person.
