THE BACHELOR'S THERMOMETER.

The following amusing and clever article was sent for publication in the Home Journal by a friend residing among the Hudson Highlands, who states that it is the production of a young gentleman of London of distinguished position, and the nephew of a celebrated officer in the Crimean war. If our recollection serves us right, it appeared twenty or thirty years ago in an English magazine.—At any rate, it is worth printing and re-printing again:

No man, according to Samuel Johnson, sits down to depreciate himself, even in writing a letter—how then can we expect any man to gibbet himself in immortal type? "The Bachelor's Thermometer" was evidently never intended to see the light. It may therefore be viewed as probably the most sincere self-memoir that ever was penned.

Ætatis 30—Look back through a vista of ten years; remember that at twenty, I looked upon a man of thirty a middle-aged man; wondered at my error, and protracted the middle aged to forty. Said to myself, "Forty is the age of wisdom." Reflected generally upon past life; wished myself twenty again, and exclaimed, "If I were but twenty what a scholar I would be by thirty! but it is too late now." Looked in the glass; still youthful, but getting rather fat. Young says, "A fool at forty is a fool indeed; forty, therefore, must be the age of wisdom.

31—Read in the Morning Chronicle that a watchmaker in Paris, aged thirty-one, had shot himself for love; more fool the watchmaker; agreed that nobody fell in love after twenty. Quoted Sterne; "The expression, fall in love, evidently shows love to be beneath a man." Went to Drury Lane; saw Miss Crotch in Rosetta, and fell in love with her; received her ultimatum; was three months making up my mind (a long time for making up such a little parcel) when Kitty Crotch eloped with Lord Buskin; pretended to be very glad; took three turns up and down the library, and looked in the glass; getting rather fat and florid; met a friend in Gray's Inn, who said I was evidently in rude health; thought the compliment ruder than the health.

32—Passion for dancing rather on the decline; voted sitting out play and farce one of the impossibilities; still in stage-box three nights per week; sympathized with the public in vexation, occasioned by non-attendance the other three; can't please everybody; began, to wonder at the pleasure of kicking one's heels on a chalked floor till four in the morning; sold gray mare who reared at three carriages, and shook me out of the saddle; thought saddle making rather worse than formerly; hair growing thin; bought a bottle of Trico-rian fluid. Mem.—A flattering unction.

33—Hair thinner; serious thoughts of a wig; I met Colonel Buckhorse who wears one—devil in a bush—serious thoughts of letting it alone; met a Fellow-Etonian in the Green Park, who told me I wore well; wondered what he meant; gave up Cricket Club on account of the bad air about Paddington; could not run in without being out of breath.

34—Measured for a new coat; tailor prepared fresh measure—thinting something about bulk—old measure too short—parchment shrinks; shortened my morning ride to Hampstead and Highgate, and wondered what people could see at Hendon; determined not to marry; means expensive and dubious; counted eighteen bald heads in the pit at the opera—so much the better—the more the merrier.

35—Tried on an old great coat, and found an old little one; cloth shrinks as well as parchments; red face in putting on shoes; bought a shoe-horn; remembered quizzing my uncle George for using one; then young and foolish; brother Charles has eight children; served him right for marrying at twenty-one—age of discretion, too; hunting-belts for gentlemen hung up in a glover's window; longed to buy one, but two women in shop cheapening mittens. Three gray hairs in left eyebrow.

36—Several gray hairs in whiskers, all owing to carelessness in manufacturing of shaving soap; remembered thinking my father an old man at thirty-six; settled the point—men grew old sooner in former days; laid blame on flapped waistcoats and tie wigs; studied on the Serpentine—gout—very foolish exercise—only fit for boys; gave skates to Charles' eldest son.

37—Fell in love again; rather pleased to find myself not too old for that passion; Emma only nineteen; what then? women require protectors; die settled; devilishly frightened; too late to get off; luckily jilted; Emma married George Parker one day before me; again determined never to marry; turned off old tailor, and took to new one in Bond street; some of these fellows make a man look ten years younger—not that that was the reason.

38—Stuck rather more to dinner parties; gave up country dancing; money; music certainly more fatiguing than formerly; fiddlers play too quick; quadrilles stealing hither over the Channel; thought of adding to the number of grave gentlemen who learnt to dance; Dick Dapper dubbed me one of the over-grown; very impertinent, and utterly untrue.

39—Quadrilles rising; wondered sober mistresses of families would allow their carpets to be beat after that fashion; dinner parties increasing; found myself gradually Ponlucing it towards top of table; dreaded ultima thule of hostess' elbow; good place for cutting turkeys, bad for cutting jokes; wondered why I was always desired to walk up; met two school-fellows at Pimlico; both fat and red-faced; used to say at school they were of my age; what lies boys tell!

40—Looked back ten years; remember at thirty thinking forty a middle aged man; must have meant fifty; fifty certainly the age of wisdom; determined to be wise in ten years; wished to learn music and Italian; tried Logier; it would not do; no defect of capacity, but those things should be learnt in childhood.

41—New furnished chambers; look in new glass; one chin too much; looked in other new glass; chin still double; art of glass making on the decline, sold my horse, and wondered people could find pleasure in being bumped in what were legs made for?

42—Gout again; that disease certainly attacks young people more than formerly; caught myself at a rubber at whist, and blushed; tried my hand at original composition, and found a hankering after epigram and satire; wondered I could never write love sonnets; imitated Horace's ode "Ne sit ancilla;" did not mean anything serious, though Susan is certainly civil and attentive.

43—Bought a hunting-belt; braced myself up till ready to burst; intestines not to be trifled with; threw it aside; young men now-a-days much too slight in the waist; read in the Morning Post an advertisement, "Pills to prevent Corpulency;" bought a box; never the thinner, though much the sicker.

44—Met Fanny Stapleton, now Mrs. Meadows, at Bullock's Museum; twenty-five years ago wanted to marry her; what an escape! women certainly age much sooner than men; Charles's eldest boy began to think himself a man; starched cravat and a cane; what presumption! at his age I was a child.

45—A few wrinkles about the eyes commonly called crow's feet; must have caught cold, began to talk politics and shirk the drawing-room; eulogized Garrick; saw nothing in Kean; talked of Lord North; wondered at the licentiousness of the modern press; why can't people be civil, like Junius and John Wilkes, in the good old times?

46—Rather on the decline, but still hand some and interesting; all of them talk too much or too little; began to call chambermaids of inns "my dear;" thought money expended upon Waterloo Bridge might have been better employed; listened to a howl from Captain Querulous about family expenses; price of bread and butcher's meat; did not care a jot if bread was a shilling a roll, and butcher's meat fifty pounds a quarter; hugged myself in "single blessedness," and wished him good morning.

47—Top of head quite bald; pleaded Lord Eldon's authority; shook it on reflecting that I was but three years removed from the age of wisdom; teeth sound, but not as white as heretofore; something the matter with dentifrice; began to be cautious in chronology; bad thing to remember too far back; had serious thoughts of not remembering Miss Farren.

48—Quite settled not to remember Miss Farren; told Laura Willis, that Palmer, who died when I was nineteen, did not look forty-eight.

49—Resolved never to marry for anything but money or rank.

50—Age of wisdom; married my house-
