Schuylkill Hazen polled some twenty or more votes against the Amendment granting the soldiers the right to vote, and would we presume, have polled more, had not a soldier who belongs to that place declared emphatically, that if he knew of any voting against it, he would on his roturn home with his companions-in-arms, lead them to cut their throats. This earnest threat frightened the Cops, and the mass prudently stayed away. The Copperheads here and elsewhere throughout the County; at the late election were anxious to vote against the Amendment, but they were arraid that if they did the soldiers would call them to account. The fact that the mass of them in some sections of the County refused to vote at all proves their bitter hostility to the measure.

In spoaking of the projector of the mine, the same correspondent says:

"To Lieut.-Col. Pleasants of the 48th Pennsylvania Regiment belongs the honor of suggesting and constructing the work mentioned. Several weeks since he submitted to his superiors a plan by which a formidable fort situated on the Rebel line in Burnside's front and about two thousand yards southeast from Petersburg might be destroyed by the explosion of a mine underneath. This fort occupied a commanding position on a crest in front of our lines, and from its location was able to inflict considerable injury pen our troops. Three hundred yards behind this work another crest arises, at the foot of which on the other slide lies the city of Petersburg. It was evident then that the occupation by our troops of the crest nearest the city would give us its possession, and the only question then was how to gain it with the least possible loss of life.—
Could a tunnel nearly five hundred feet in length be extended to the Rebel work, and a mine constructed underneath without detection by the enemy, and, after its construction, would its explosion of a mine underneath of the rest nearest the city would give us its possession, and the only question then was how to gain it with the least possible loss of life.—

Messes. Ens.: - A few words of encouragement the Amendment, 543; against Amendment, 88

Yours Truly, Occasional. From the New York Tribune of Monday.

ATLANTA.

We publish this morning an account of the battle of the 22d July near Atlanta, information concerning which has heretofore been supplied chiefly from the Rebel War Office. On our side we have not, even yet, any official intelligence whatever, but the narrative we now give will help the careful reader to a judgment as to the result of the battle.

It does not appear to have been a general engagement. In the action of the 20th, the enemy had massed against the right wing of Gen. Sherman's extended and partially disconnected forces, and got soundly thrashed for their pains. On the day following, Gen! Sherman seems to have pushed his Jeft, comprising the three corps of the Army of the Tennessee under McPherson, still further beyond the Angusta Railroad, reaching round a little south of Atlauta. On the next day he was attacked at that point. The 17th Corps, Gen! Blair, held the extreme lett, and held if negligently. Two Rebel corps. Stewart's and Cheatham's, got upon Gen. Blairs flank, surprised him, and rolled up a large portion of his line without ceremony. It was in consequence of this unexpected and unnecessary disaster that Gen. McPherson met his death. Riding to the frontiand amid the disordered and tangled lines of General Blair, getting unawares beyond the furthest of his own troops, he came close upon a body of Rebeis, was fred upon and killed. As the story is now told, the act on the part of the enemy was little better than murder, Gen. McPherson being almost alone, and receiving a volley from a large concealed force, preceded by no demand for his surreuder.

The disaster to the 17th Corps extended partially to the 15th and 16th; but Hoods official assertion that our forces were driven from their works is not strictly true, because there were no "works" except slight entrenchments. There had been no time to construct anything, Hood chaims to have taken 13 gins, 15 stands of colors, and 2,000 prisoners. The loss of four guns is admitted on our side—no mention From the New York Tribune of Monday. ATLANTA.

This requisition was in writing, and was signed by Gen. Jubel Early. It is now established by indisputable proof that this demand was a mere pretext on the part of the maurauders to cover up. a purpose formed before they reached the town to burn it to the ground. PAINE—At Ashland, on the 17th of July, Esther Evans, former wife of William Paine, deceased, aged 9 years, 3 months and 10 days.

At a special meeting of Middleport Lodge, No. 1474, I. O. O. F., held Angust 1st, 1864, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Wiseras, A rebellion formidable in its array of strength disturbing the harmony which has hitherto characterized the relations of the different commonwealths of our land, and perilling the civil liberties and religious rights sacredly transmitted by our fathers and fondly cherished by us; and

Wiseras, Past Grand Capt. B. B. Shuck, a member of our beloved Order, hearing the appeal of his country. for her defense, did, from motives of patriotism and devotion to right, early in the history of the present struggle for national life, nobly consecrate his life, the most precious of our earthly possessions, to the service of his country, laying it a willing sacrifice upon the altar of liberty; and

WHERMAS. After three years of patient endurance, cheerful sacrifices, constant peril and unfaltering heroism, which was rewarded by his promotion to the command of the Company of which he was a member, he was severely wounded during an engagement with the enemy before Petersburg, June 25th, from the effects of which, after lingering in pain for a few weeks, he died: Therefore,
