W. BALDWRN & Co., Engineers,
Would call the attention of Railroad Managers, and those inferested in Railroad Property, to their system of Locomotive Engines, in while they are adapted to the particular business for which they may be required; by the use of one, two, three or, four pair of driving wheels; and the use of the whole, or so much of the weight as may be desirable for adhesion; and in accommodating them to the grades, curves, strength of superstruction, and rail and work to be done. By these means the maximum useful effect of the power is secured with the least expense for attendance; cost of fuel, and repairs to Road and Engine.
With these objects in view, and as the result of twentythree years practical experience in the business by our senior partuer, we manufacture five different kinds of Engines, and several classes of sizes of each kind.
Particular attention paid to the strength of the machine in the plan and workmanship of all the details.
Our long experience and opportunities of obtaining information, enables us to offer these engines with the assurance that in efficiency, economy and durability, they will compare favorably, with those of any other kind in use. We also furnish to order, wheels, axles, bowling or low moor tire to fit confres without boring, composition castings for bearings of every description of Copper, Sheet Iron and Boiler Works; and every article appertaining to the repair or renewal of Locomotive Engines.

Sur:—The distinguished position which you now hold in the presence of the American people, as the nominee of a convention held in obedience to the usages of a powerful party, and looking forward to the possibility of your election as the executive representative of a mighty nation of freemen, impels us to address you, as we have already done to the President of the United States, a brief exposition of some of the views which have induced the founders of the Working. have induced the founders of the tropands men's Democratic Republican Association to organize for effective action in the great best slave race is to contradict all history, and in effect to assert that there is some summer of political industrial and social re-There are moments in the lives of men which form the crisis of their character and their fate. There are hours and days in the their late. There are nours and days in the life of nations which form the crisis of their destiny. Decisions thus made may carry them safely past their danger, or hasten them on to their ruin and their overthrow. In the experience of individuals and of societies, there are invisible lines, which, once passed, can never be recrossed; and it is sometimes a question with us whether our once prosperous and happy nation has not already passed that equatorial line of its moral history, which, unnoticed and unobserved by the navigators, has served to separate us from the higher and better parallels of patriotism, reason, and exalted freedom. We trust this point of our history has not already been passed, but that we may yet hope for the triumph of those lofty principles of political much of those lofty principles of political which have so long been our boast.

In geonomical, the whole teachings were frequently reiterated and enforced by other contributors. They may, therefore, be regarded as a fair expression of the philosophical system of the leaders of the Rebellion.

Another writer in the same work speaks as follows:

"Our third: That the white race is the true and best slave race.

"To say the white race is not the true and perior race; for the race that is most social, tame, domestic, skillful, educatable, and most readily submits to government in all its usual forms, is certainly the hignest race. Nine-tenths of government is slavery, even in so-called free societies. Married women, chil-dren, sailors, wards, apprentices, &c., are not governed by law, but by the will of superiors —their persons are enslaved."

The writer here not only justifies the slavery of the black man, but enters into a la-bored argument to prove that the white race is glory has been dimmed—this practice, under which the nation has advanced from the common transactions of life. To make an infecent and colossal grandeur of thirty-four states spanning a continent in its territorial greatness, has been suddenly and violently interrupted. The appeal has been made from the ballot-box and the forum to the bullet of the battle-field.

This appeal to the bloody arbitration of war must be met by, the lovers of our free institutions as freemen only can meet it. To surrender the character, honor and glory of our inheritance to the violent attempt of traitors, without an effort at resistance, would be no less base and infamous than the treason itself. If the possible foundation of a free Democratic Government of the people were deemed worthy of the blood and treasure of our fathers; are more worthy of our sacrifice is the perpetuity of these institutions, remained of peace.

The day swiftly approaches when the millions of the loyal States who have remained true to the Constitution shall be called to decide upon the fundamental ideas of their future policy. Mbor? Yet, says this writer: "Let us seek at oned to eradicate every vestige of radical democracy, every feature tending to make ours a popular government, making it subject only to the intelligent and virtuous, and those who are interested in its successful administration. What, we may ask our adopted fellow-citizens, is to be the policy of these leaders to-wards those foreigners who may possibly find a home in the Confederacy? Let this author, whose ink is scarcely dry, answer the ques-

We accept the issue reluctantly, and with heavy hearts that we must; but for the sake of freedom, for humanity, and for the world, and we declare that our nation is now engaged in a death struggle of democracy against aristocracy and despotism. We shall stand by the Government and by the Union, and shall willingly see all their enemies over that all questions of public policy could be referred to the people, whose decision, constitutionally expressed at the ballot-box, should be the ultimate verdict of this grand court of appeal, until these questions could have a re-hearing and a further decision at the period named in the organic law. This glory has been dimmed—this practice, under which the nation has advanced from the condition of a few detached colonies to the magwhether they be Montgomery or peculiar institutions.
