spirit of the slave aristocracy appears to be as insolent and defiant as ever. It is evident literary matter. that before we can have permanent peace that spirit must be tamed into submission. Where the National authority is accepted in the South gracefully if not cheerfully, the people can with safety be permitted to share not, the people should be taught that there is a well organized distinction between the rights of citizens and the rights of subjects, and that obedience can be exacted from those as subjects who may not be admitted to the privileges of citizens. There is loyalty enough in any State to preserve its organization, and we shall not require the aid of those who are treasonably disposed, to carry on either State or National government. The and 8 minutes. reconstruction of Southern society on the basis of universal freedom, will harmonize the whole and dominate every element of discord, and the national flag, upheld at every point, will winnow the whole Southern clime of the infection of treason, and make it unfit or the abode of any but freedmen.

It is exceedingly satisfactory to know that point, will winnow the whole Southern clime of the infection of treason, and make it unfit for the abode of any but freedmen.

we have in the Presidential chair a man who lately said, "Treason is more than a political offence—it is a crime." It is important at this stage in the history of our country that a man of Jacksonian firmness should direct the affairs of the Republic. We think that we have such a man in Andrew Johnson. His sentiments are plain and to the point. A few days since in Washington a number of loyal Pennsylvanians called on the President hot coffee, tea, ovsters in every style, clam soup, to pay their respects. In the course of their

We have not come here to advise: we are not guilty of such impertinence. We may be permitted, however, to say that, if you shall deal with the traitors in arme, and with such us aid and abet them, with a firmer hand and with a sterner purpose than has been hitherto exhibited, you will have our most cordial approval. President Johnson made to the delegation a very satisfactory reply, concluding as fol-

There can be no liberty without law: but law is useless unless it is enforced. You can have no union without law; you can have no liberty without law; the crimes of the country should be defined by law, and they should be punished according to law. Treason is defined in your Constitution and in the acts of Congress, and the law should be enforced, that those who have incurred the penalty may be made to pay it. There are undoubtedly times when executive mercy and elemency may be exercised; a project discrimination may be made. Hundreds, yea thousands, have been involved in this rebellion by the influence of high position, in many instances by force; and thus according to law, they have been milty of treason; but to those who have been conscripted, to those who have been conscripted to those who have been conscripted to those who have been conscripted to those who have been conscripted, to those who have been deceived and deluded, my heart prompts my tongue to utter, and my jndgment sanctions. "Clemency—Amnesty." But of the country in this rebellion, and caused iunocent and deluded men to commit treason, I shall only say that their crime should be punished, and they should meet their fate according to law. (Applause.) Human executive elemency may sometimes be of doubtful propriety. Mercy is considered one of the highest attributes their crime should be punished, and they should meet their fate according to law. [Applause.] Humen executive elemency may simetimes be of doubtful propriety. Mercy is considered one of the highest attributes of Divinity, and in some cases it may be well to leave its exercise to Him who controls and judges all.

We have he ... dithat "mercy has been slain," Mercy may be destroyed but I must in God that Justice has been preserved. [Applause.] Mercy has been slain, and it is for the American people to see that justice shall be done for the overthrow of mercy.

Allusion has been made to the fact that I have lived amongst what is called a Southern aristocracy. Upon the subject of aristocracy and monopoly my whole public life shows one uniform and consistent record. I have opposed a certain description of aristocracy. I oppose it now. There is a kind of aristocracy, however, that I admire and love; it commands my respect wherever I see it. I allude to an aristocracy of virtue, an aristocracy of talent, an aristocracy of intellect, an aristocracy that is based upon merit, and not upon factitions circumstances. I admire an aristocracy of ishor when a nation lives by its industrial pursuits; to that my life and energies have been devoted. (Great applause.) At this time wher I am entering upon the duties of this office, under such circumstances. I see no reason why I should abandon my former course or change my former opinions.

When President Johnson says that the conscious, intelligent leaders of the Rebellion, do for them? What is best calculated to sre interested in the project.

At once give them employment. War has its many curses, and not the least is the effect of camp life in to some extent unfitting men for peaceful and laborious pursuits. The seasons of idleness in camp are baneful-idleness at home much more so. We trust to see these heroes, after a few days, or, at furthest, weeks of recreation amid their former friends at home, quietly drop into their former pursuits. Yet this can only be by our former pursuits. Yet this can only be by our people everywhere showing a disposition and a preference for soldiers over others in giving employment. Do not allow them, through idleness, and especially through unwilling idleness to drop into habits of dissipation and vice. The Christian and Sanitary Commissions should at once institute organizations and for both able and disabled soldiers, where the employer and the workmen may be brought into immediate communication—where the man who wants a bookeeper, clerk, shoema-ker or blacksmith, a laborer, porter, farmi hand or a teamster, can procure the address

Another Brare Soldier Gone.—Lewis, son of Danl. B. D. 193th Pennsylvania Regiment, and was in the 25th year of his age when he died. His remains were interred near Fe crishurg. He was in every respect, a good soldier. He served with credit, three years in the Pennsylvania Reserves. After they were mustered out of the service, he entered the 198th Regiment, and served gallantly up to the hour of his death. He passed uninjured through fifteen battles. In the sixteenth he fall a marting to the principle of Free

The news of the fall of Richmond caused a great commotion in Europe. The English press, however, were divided in opinion. The Times advised the remnant of the rebels to submit to their conquerors. The Index and Post thought the war would be continued in some new form by the rebels. The Standard did not think it was all over with the South. The Telegraph said it was beyond human possibility that the reless could conquer their ind pendence. Grant's ability was universal to the substitute of the first place, upon the charge of selling liquor without U.S. license. He was bound over in the sum of one thousand dollars for his appearance at the U.S. Court in Philadelphia. The penalty for the offence is five hundred dollars fine, or two years imprisonment, or both at the discretion of the court. Carr being unable to procure bail was committed. While in charge of Deputy Marshal Chrisman, endeavoring to procure bail, Carr remarked that it was hard that a man who had been a delegate for years at the "dimmeratic" conventions, could find no one to be friend him. "A creed in need to a friend indeed."

A NATION'S GRATITUDE.

The Family of Our Lamented President.—The impression exists that President Lincoln left his family comfortable pecuniarity. Unfortunately, it is erroueous. When he entered upon the Presidency Mr. Lincoln was only in moderate circumstances, and during his term of office his necessary expenses and his generosity to the soldiers, prevented his saving anything from his salary. His family therefore, may be considered in straightened circumstances. A fund to reach One Hundred Thousand Dollars, has been started, to which a gentleman of New York subscribes ten thousand dollars. It is not expected however, that subscriptions from the mass of the people, will exceed in amount, one dollar each. A book to receive subscriptions is now open at the store of B. Bannan, in which the names of all who admire the character of Mr. Lincoln and revere his

LETTER FROM MOBILE.

MOBILE ALA., April 18. 1865.

Bouross Miners Journal.:—Here we are in Mobile with everything as quiet as if the "Yankees" were not here. Spanish Fort after four hours severe bombardment was assaulted at 11.30 P. M., on the 5th inst., and by 12 M. It was in our possession. Four fags, forty-six pieces of artillery of every calibre. including four of the celebrated Blakely guns, seven hundred prisoners and eight hundred small arms are the fruits of this signal victory. Among the prisoners are twenty commissioned officers Twenty-six of the enemy's dead were buried on the field. Our loss in killed and wounded. I dare say that during this war there has not a work of such strength been assaulted with so little loss to the assaulting party. On Sunday the 19th, 1stn and took corps moved to Blakely, the advance arriving in time to assist in as-saulting Fort Blakely. To Gen. Steele's command is accredited, assisted by Garard's division of the 26th, corps, and by Jentu's of the 18th corps, the honor of capturing the strongest works defending Mobile.

corpt. and op senters of the tan corps, the annor of capturing the strongest works defending Mobile.

Hawkins's colored division fought like tigers, losing five hundred killed and wounded. With Blakely we captured Maj. Gens, Cockrell and Thomas, Brig. Gen. Leddell and nearly four thousand officers and privates. Fifty-two cannons, a number of flags, a large quantity of ammunition, and about four thousand small arms of ammunition, and about four thousand small arms were taken, beside those taken from he prisoners. On the 10th inst. Lucas's cavalry were sent up the Tansas river to threaten Mobile from the rear, while Gen. Granger with his corps. the 13th, retraced his steps to Starks Landing, and on the night of the 11th, embarked on transports, and by 10.P. M. of the 12th, had landed on the western shore at Magnolia, race course, Granger and Thatcher made a demand for the immediate surrender of the city, which was acceded to by Mayor Slough, our forces quietly occupied the city at 3 P. M., Gen. Granger taking the "Battle House," for his headquarters.

Rivers of Blood.—The circulation in the system is not unlike the flow of rivers to the sea, which move smoothly until they are clogged or obstructed.—But when drift wood or alluvial deposit dams them up, then comes the tearing devastation that follows the obstruction of a force which cannot be stayed. So the blood circulates insensibly through the system intil it becomes clogged by disease; then burst out the ulcers, sores and disorders which follow that condition.
