SEPTEMBER. Sweet is the voice that calls
From babbling waterfalls
In memows where the downy seeds are flying;
And soft the breezes blow
And eddying come and go
In faded gardens where the rose is dying.

Among the stubbled corn
The blithe quail pipes at morn.
The merry partidge drums in hidden places.
And glittering insects gleam
Above the reedy stream
Where busy spiders spin their filmy laces. At eve, cool shadows fall
Across the garden wall,
And on the clustered grapes to purple turning, And pently vapors lie
Along the Eastern sky
Where the broad harvest moon is redly burning. Ah, soon on field and hill
The winds shall whistle chilt,
And patriarch swallows call their flocks together
To fly from frost and snow.
And seek for lands where blow
The fairer blossoms of a balmier weather.

The pollen-dusted bees
Search for the honey-lees
That linger in the last flowers of September,
While plaintive mourning doves
Coo sadly to their loves
Of the dead Summer they so well remember. The cricket chirps all day, O, fairest Summer, stay !"
The squirrel eyes askance the chestnuts browning;
The wild-fowl ny afar.
Above the foamy bar
And hasten Southward ere the skies are frowning.

Now comes a fragrant breeze
Through the dark codar trees
And round about my temples fondly lingers,

CENERAL GRANT BEFORE THE WAR. A correspondent of the Tribune gives the following account of Gen. Grant's position before the rebellion, and of the circumstances under which resumed the profession of a soldier. The parrative affords a striking illustration of the working of republican institutions, and an example for the encourage-

The leather was tanned at Covington, Kentucky, and sent to Galena. The firm did well, and it is understood made a fortune. The firm was dissolved, and a son came on to conduct the business, but in about two years he died of consumption. He was well liked, and was an excellent business man.

Meanwhile, Ulysses Grant, having graduated at West Point, went into the Mexican war, where he distinguished himself in every battle except one, when he was not present that was fought: thence he went to Oregon and acted as Captain in the Quartermaster's Department. Eleven years since he resigned his commission, and went to St. Louis.

'THE LIFE OF THE BODY IS THE EYE."

The sunken machinery of the eye is the sure precursor of disease and death. The methodical use of Mrs. M. O. BROWN'S POOR RICHARD'S RYE WATER, morning and night, will in due time lift the sunken eyes, and also prevent the eyes from sinking. It will also cleanse the eyes and keep them in life, as dewdrops the plants. 'Franklin's Almanac' (from which the Eye Water derives its name) says 'an ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure."

Where he had some interest in a piece of land, and I was told he engaged in hauling wood to market, himself driving his own oven.

On the death of his brother, his father en gaged him to come hither, and take charge of the store. Now I come to mention things story. Statements previously made about Gen. Grant will be blown away. Many a young man, on reading what follows, will be encouraged. I gather my account from the most trustworthy sources.

Capt. Grant, as he was called, found the affairs of the concern in great disorder; but affairs of the concern in great disorder, but he went to work, and, in three weeks, had pected to live on $480 a year. To do this, and to live in society, is impossible. Everything must be cheap and plain. Sometimes his wife had a hired girl, but usually she did During these two years Capt. Grant made very few acquaintances. There were plenty of business men on the street who did no know him, and who never heard his name spoken. I presume it would be easy to num ber his associates on one's fingers. I have of him till he was put in command at Cairo On his arrival here to day, the vast majority of the citizens of Galena are able to recog nize him only by his portraits; and yet this is the only home he has.

A few knew him intimately. Among these was H. H. Houghton, editor of The Galena Gazette, for ever thirty years. Mr. Houghton learned most of the Captain from his father, and he came to admire and respect him; in fact, he had studied him. Hon. E. B. Washthe best friends he had on earth.

Those two years were years of trial and discouragement. In fact, the Captain came hither from St. Louis in a great degree disheartened, still he would not give up. He is described as a broken down man. This anecdote is related: During the great depreci-ation in currency, Capt. Grant bought pork of the farmers to send on East to get New York exchange. One day some farmers sold him their pork; they inquired where they could get gold; they must have it to pay taxes. The clerk in the house would sell it for a certain figure; Capt. Grant said he believed this was too much; he did not know exactly what it ought to be, but he advised them to go to the bank and inquire. The result was that the farmers saved $12. That was the style of the man. At this same time, Capt. Grant was drawing beyond his expenses, though this was not ascertained till the end of the year. He could not live on $40 a month. He seldom went abroad. A few near neighbours were all he visited; here he would sit and smoke his pipe. His conversation was varied, but he liked to talk on the Mexican war, Mostly he was a man of silence. Mr. Washburn tells me that he seemed to him to be thinking, on EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

Mr. Houghton, editor of the Gazerrs, on the Sist of May, 1861, describes Col. Grant as the soul of honor, and no man breathes who has a more patriotic heart, and four new soldiers need the leadership of a rare man like Capt. Grant." June 20, the paper says, a command of an Ohio regiment has been tendered Capt. Grant and it urges his fitness for a high command. June 22, is a notice that Capt. Grant has accepted the coloneity. of the 7th district regiment. July 31, states that Col. Grant is to be promoted to a brigadiership, and congratulates the service on the event. Dec. 23, is an editorial estimating the character of Gen. Grant, and in particular it mentions his modesty, frankness, sagacity, and strategy. I take these things from the files of the paper myself.

I will say here that Gen. Grant's father was a thorough going Union man, if not a radical; but there were some relatives quite different. To earnest young men this history of Gen. Grant will be a lesson for all time. It teaches that in waiting there are exceeding great rewards. If need be, one must wait his whole life and expect the time of opportuni ty in another world. To learn to wait is the highest wisdom. Crimes of every character, diseases of every name, and infamy and shame are the fate of those who will not learn to wait. ANDY JOHNSON AND THE DEMOCRACY. Hypocrisy is said to be "the tribute which" vice pays to virtue." The Democratic en-dorsement of the National Administration is vice pays to virtue." The Democratic endorsement of the National Administration is something of the same kind. The leaders a scroll wreath, beautifully worked in the marble.

of that party hope to find favor with the Above these rises a single fluted column of beau-There is here and there a Union man who seems disturbed by these hypocritical demonstrations. They have so poor an opinion of Democratic patriotism that they are disposed to doubt the genuineness of whatever it approves.

But it should be remembered that the Democratic party is experimenting. Having been loyalty, it is trying a new dodge—not because it has improved in principles or morals, but because it sees no other mode of getting out from under the heavy weight of public contempt which has so long rested upon it.

Besides, generally, the rank and file of the Pemocracy really believe what the leaders only assert from policy, viz: that the Administration deserves universal approval. When the time shall come, as it soon will, for the Democratic leaders to assume new characters in the "Comedy of Errors," they will be mor-tified to find that their followers either cannot or will not play the parts assigned them .or will not play the parts assigned them.—
Having been taught to think well of Andy Johnson, and being ignorant of any reason why they should think otherwise, they will forget that they were intended to merely sham a friendship, and will remain permanently from feelings of patriotism, where they were placed temporarily, for an ignoble purpose. It is no more dangerous to play with edged tools than it is to trifle with a really sincere constituency. It is hard for some men to get stituency. It is hard for some men to get in a right position, but once there, it is not Government from a fearful and gigantic asalways easy to entice them away from it.
They may be called away, by party drums and trumpets, and so may spirits be called from the vasty deep. But will they come?
In this movement to humbug others, the returns to the Agricultural Burcau.

In this movement to humbug others, the Democratic leaders may, when it shall be too late to correct the blunder, find that they have humbuged themselves.

And still further: No party can permanently strengthen itself by promouncing formal eulogies upon the representatives, principles and policy of its opponent. The inference of those who have not acquired the bad art of the paltering in a double sense," will be that it cannot be very wrong to vote for a party cannot be very wrong to vote for a party on the manufacture and product, and the ap-whose representatives and principles are thus prehended tax on the leaf are assigned as the formally proclaimed to be right. It is possiformally proclaimed to be right. It is possible for a party as well as for an individual to "taken in its own craftiness." The chances are that the Democratic party will furnish an illustration of the universal application of this old aphorism.
So that no one need feel uneasy when Copperheads praise Andy Johnson. It is the iribute which fictitious loyalty pays to real patriotism. Bankrupt in principle and popular favor, they "assume a virtue though they have it not," in the vain hope of thereby deceiving the people and regaining what they have lost. They will have their labor for their pains, and instead of rising by their

THE TOP RAIL AT THE BOTTOM. I cannot refrain from citing an instance of the change wrought by the war, the reversing of the status of things. There are many instances like that so laconically described in the last Harper, viz: "a negro soldier on guard at a camp for rebel prisoners observed his old master among the captured. The work has now been finished, and all that is wanting is the formal reception of it from the hands of the builders and its dedication, which is appointed to take place on the 20th of September next. The monument is fifty-two feet seven inches high, and stands upon a base of rough granite ten feet six inches square. All except the base is marble. Immediately above the base is a solid marble block, facing the cardinal points, and in it have been placed tablets with inscriptions encircled by a wreath. On the north side of the base are the words: "He who realizes that the true mission of man on earth is to rise above the level of individual influence, and to recognize the fatherhood of God over all, and the brotherhood of man, is nature's true nobleman." THE SO-CALLED DEMOCRATIC PLATFORMS abound with earnest professions of regard for "State rights" and denunciations of military commissions. The practical meaning of the first of these declarations, as applied to the present position of national affairs, is, that they wish the slave States to be permitted to re-establish slavery under some new name, so that the negroes may be as much oppress-ed hereafter as before the war; and of the second, that they wish swindling contractors, conspirators, and the wretches who con-demned our unfortunate prisoners to the fatal tortures of Andersonville and Libby to escane unwhipt of justice. They heap condemnation upon the men who rescued the nation from traitorous attacks, and reserve an abundance
