No greater insult can be offered to an intelligent people than that of getting up a complicated inhuman machine wherewith to operate on the delicate, organs of the head—passing through the ears and up the nostrils for a cure of Catarrh and Deafness. This monstrous mode of treatment may be resorted to where there is neither light or knowledge; it is a lie on the character of God; it, is illogical, and as opposite to ruth as light to darkness; if racks and destroys the entire nervous system, and many never recover from the terrible disaster. Many never rully from this unnatural and violent mode of treatment; some have ost their reason.

"Oh, dress thee in garments all white,
so shining and flowing and clean,
for in them, thou doet seem to my sight,
The fairest that ever was seen.
And wear on thy finger this ring,
And where thou hast met me of yore.
Neath the tree, by the side of the spring,
Meet me when I come from the war."

He said, and he kissed her red lips.
Then smiled and then sighed, and was gone; So her life passed under cellipse.
Because her life's nun was withdrawn.
But she loved, and she worked, and she prayed, And she thought of his words o'er and o'er, And the day, when in white all arrayed.
She would welcome him home from the war.

And he loved, and he worked, and he prayed, And many a noble deed wrought,
For his trust in the Lord it was stayed,
And for Him and his constry he fought.
And he kept in his mind this sweet lore and he kept in his mind this sweet lore and he kept in his mind this sweet lore and he kept in his mind this sweet lore and he kept in his mind this sweet lore and he have come back from the war.
She will meet me in currents all white. She will meet me in garments all white.

"O! mother dress me in white," she said,
"And curl my hair so brown:
Let them carry me to the spring," she said,
"And lay me genlty down:
And tell him I kept my faith," she said,
"If I die before he come.
Now leave me a little while," she said,

The sun went down in the west.
In crimson and purple and gold;
Each bird and each bee went to rest,
And the sheep all returned to the fold:
The cattle, with serious face,
Came in one by one to the field,
And the milk-maidens each in her place,
In her bucket received the sweet yield:

All the sights and the sounds were of peace,
And at peace was the heart of the maid;
But why dose her lover's smile cease?
And why dose he start back afraid?
"Oh! what does this mean?" then he cried
In a low faltering accent of awe.
Then louder: "My darling," my bride.
Come! welgome me home from the war."

She looked not, and smiled not, nor spoke,
To give to his anguish relief;
Not a sound on the balmy air broke.
But the wild, mournful voice of his grief,
But dressed in her garments so white.
With her hands crossed her still bosom o'er,
And the ring on her finger so bright.
So she lay when he came from the war!

"THE LIFE OF THE BODY IS THE EYE."

The sunken machinery of the eye is the sure precursor of disease and death. The methodical use of Mrs. M. G. BROWN'S POOR RICHARDS EYE, WATER, morning and night, will in due time lift the sunken eyes, and also prevent the eyes from slaking, it will also cleanse the eyes and keep them in life, as dewdrops the plants. "Franklin's Almanae" (from which the Eye Water derives its same) says 'an ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure."

Since the return of the Union soldiers the Copperheads of this State are endeavoring to create the impression that they have always done their utmost to sustain their rights at home and on hostile fields. These assertions are false in every particular. There is not an act on the statute books in which it can be shown that the leaders of that party ever manifested the least sympathy for the Union soldiers. WATER, morning and night, will in due time lift the sunken eyes, and also prevent the eyes from slaking, it will also cleanse the eyes and keep them in life, as dewdrops the "plants." "Fine life as an act on the statute books in which it can be shown that the leaders of that party ever manifested the least sympathy for the Union soldiers. We concerned and occupied our hospitals were treated more kindly than the Union soldiers who create the impression that they have always does friendly to soldiers, and that they have done their utmost to sustain their rights at home and on hostile fields. These assertions are false in every particular. There is not an act on the statute books in which it can be shown that the leaders of that party ever manifested the least sympathy for the Union soldiers. The public record of the party, which now profess such profound sympathy for the soldier, cannot be obliterated, and we subjoin a ew facts for the meditation of the soldier. On the 23d day of August, 1864, the Sente proceeded to the consideration of the bill o. 1345, entitled an act to regulate elections ov soldiers in actual military service. The whole session was consumed in the consideration of the bill, and on the final assage of the same, the whole party voted

WALLACE, the present Chairman of the State Central Committee, was the party leader in the Senate THE COPPERHEADS IN THE HOUSE Whilst the Copperheads in the Senate were doing their atmost to degrade the soldier, their friends in the House were not idle in the same dirly work.

By examining the official proceedings, published in the Legislative Record, of the scssion of 1864, it will be seen that every effort was made to defeat the bill giving the soldier the right to vote in the field, and that many of the bold, independent members, as they styled themselves, spoke defiantly of the soldier who exposed himself in defence of his country.

Whilst the bill was under consideration Mr. LABAR, the leader of the Copperhead faction in the House, from Bucks County, made the following remarks: "As for myself, I am opposed to the son-dien voting anywhere. I am opposed to HIS MEDDLING-WITH THE BALLOT BOX, the sa credness of the ballot box being the great palladium of the American freedom. What ever my fellow-members in this House may think of me, it will be handed down to pos terity that I was one of the Democrats wh had the hardihood to vote against the right of the soldier to vote."

(This speech is recorded on page 1,304 of the Legislative Record, session 1864)
Such were the general expressions used b

the most ardent Copperheads, whilst those of the "milder sort" attempted to defeat the bi by the usual parliamentary legerdemain. In this they were, however, frustrated.

SETH RINMAN PRESENTS HIS RENOWNED BEAR RAIN
CHART TO THE PRESIDENT.
The Washington Corrolled of Saturday, after giving a description of the chair, which we have before published, says:
Upon the arrival of the chair, from the place of its manufacture to this city it was conveyed "under guard" to one of the Committee rooms at the Capitol, where only a privileged few, consisting of "officials" and a small number of ladies, were permitted to gaze months wonderful work of capitol, where only a privileged few, consisting of toficials and a small number of ladies, were permitted to gaze upon the wonderful work of industry and skill. After a lapse of several days it was carried to Brady's well-known gallery and there photographed. On yesterday, through the intervention of K. V. Whalery, member of Congress from West Virginia, the President agreed to set apart any hour after four o'clock, P. M. for its reception. Accordingly a few minutes after this hour the chair was carefully placed in a wagon, and accompanied by Kinman, was conveyed to the White House. A little before five the presentation party were met by the door-keeper, and the chair ordered to be brought within the first large entrance room of the mansion. Only a few were admitted, and the eager crowd which had collected on the outside were only allowed to gratify their curiosity by peering through

At this stage the members of the press were kindly invited to ascend, and they, together with the remainder of the party, following on the heels of Kinman, soon found themselves on the threshold of the Presidential sanctum. The door of the room had been thrown open, and, without introduction or formal ceremony, the hardy pioneer of the wild Pacific slope, the conquerer of wild beasts and wild men, grasped by the hand the honored President of an all-powerful Republic. Kinman was evidently no stranger to the President, who received him in a most cordial manner.

Leaning upon his rifle, and as calm as though he had been conversing with a prairie companion, he stated to the President that recently he had been up in Pennsylvania constructing a chair from the skins of several "grizzlies" which he had killed with his own rifle, and which he desired to present to him. That in offering it as a token of respect both to the person and office, he he desired to say that in his opinion the "President of these United States was the biggest man in the world. The President was much gratified at this emphatic compliment, and in returning thanks, said he thought he knew how to appreciate both it and the chair,

The President here insisted that "Seth should sit in the chair, after which he sat in the chair, praising high its beauty and comfortable qualities. The grown children of his Excellency, several in number, now came in, and were loud in their idemands to be shown again and again this wonderful feature of the chair. No one seemed to enjoy their delight and fun more than the President, whose care-worn face was lighted up with honizont could. dent, whose care-worn face was lighted up with benignant smiles, and whose stern nature seemed to have relaxed and grown cheerful over the pleasing incident. The crowd of their own accord-now withdrew, leaving Kinman almost alone with the President. At last, however, upon suggest-ing to his Excellency that he should keep the head of the "grizzly" well protraded in order to frighten off the office-seckers and unrepentant re-bels who besiege his mansion, and receiving a warm invitation to visit the White House at his pleasure, the worthy old hunter withdrew, well pleased at his reception and success.

EDITORS MINERS' JOURNAL: — Being a subscriber to your paper, and thinking you might like to give your readers some idea of the situation of Davis, Clay and Mitchell, and their treatment, I send you the following: I enlisted in the 3d Pa. Artillery, and have been here ever since those rebel prisoners came here. When first they came Davis was put in irons and got prison diet, and had two men always in his cell, but things are wondefully changed since then. Now Davis and the two others are in separate cells by themselves, and no one with them. But in the next room there are four guards and an officer. > I am yours, A WHITE MAN'S GOVERNMENT.—The Democratic conservative organs say that they are in favor of a white man's government. We affirm that the assertion is untrue. What sort of a white man's a white man's government. We affirm that the assertion is untrue. What sort of a white man's government is that in which thirty-three Representatives sit in Congress representing four millions of non-voting black people? A pretty sort of white man's government indeed! If thuse Conservative Democrats are for a white man's government, why do they not propose to strike out their four millions of negroes from the re-resentative population? Why do they not confine themselves to white people in making up the ration of representation in Congress? Why do they not confine themselves to a white basis exclusively; and not go ransacking freedmen's villages, contraband camps and cotton plantations, in order to muster up a big consus of negroes, to increase their political power in the National Government? Come, gentlemen, a little honesty, if you please. No shuffling nor sophistry will serve your turn. If you are for a government of white men, be consistent, and do not mix up four millions of black men in your political hotch poch. What business has South Carolina with three members in the National House of Representatives, who get in on the backs of over four hundred thousand black men?—Nashville Press.

THE NORMAL SPELLER. BY A. N. RAUB, M. B.

anything that may tend to produce an interest and secure a proficiency in this useful branch of popular education. This work has evidently been the result of great care and labor. Embracing some ten thousand words, it is a comprehensive, and at the same time a rigidly systematic treatise upon the ordinary words of the English language. Let us ex-amine into the merits of the book, and notice some of its most prominent features: The author commences with monosyllables, and discusses every variety of them, from those of one letter to those of six or a rigid classification of vowel sounds and of terminations is observed. At the end of each spelling lesson, dictation exercises are placed, thus presenting the forms of the words anew to the mind of the pupil, and teaching their use by embracing them in sentences.

Having discussed monosyllables, our author takes up discyllables in a series of lessons, in which the vowel sounds are fully presented in regular order, with an especial attention paid to accent.—first giving those lissyllables which have the accent placed on the first syllable, and then those having the accent placed on the second. Pursuing the same regular method of treatment, which appears to have been uppermost in his mind, the author then treats trisylla-

bles similarly, giving first a series of words running through all the vowel sounds and their equivalents with the accent on the first syllable, then those having the accent on the second, and finally, those having the accent

the prominent points of his gift with perfect nonchalance. This originated, however, from no want of respect to his Excellency, but rather from a buoyancy of animal spirits and a genial good nature, which has won for Kinman a host of friends wherever he is known.

After displaying all the parts and points of his wonderful chair, calling attention to the formidable claws that clustered on its sides, the natural feet of the animals on which it rested, the old hutter naised. It was plain bewerest that conthe author's treatment of 'homophionous words" and 'false orthography," exceeds anything of the kind we have seen. He-has au entirely original method, and it is the onty true one. But to be appreciated, this part of the book must be examined.

The author then closes with 'mames of persons," "abbreviations," "use of capitals," devoid of practical application.

The author's treatment of 'homophonous 'prefixes" and "suffixes." One feature of the work deserves our especial notice. We refer to the author's excellent system of "dictation exercises."
