PARIS AND HELEN.

As the youthful Paris presses
Helen to his ivory breast,
Sporting with her golden tresses,
Close and ever closer pressed,

He said: "So let me quaff the nectar,
Which thy lips of ruby yield:
Glory I can leave to Hector,
Gathered in the tented field.

"Let me ever graze upon thee,
Look into thine eyes so deep:
With a daring hand I won thee,
With a faithful heart I'll keep.

"Oh, my Helen, thou bright wonder,
Who was ever like to thee?
Jove would lay aside his thunder,
So he might be blest like me.

"How mine eyes so fondly linger
On thy soft and pearly skin:
Scan each round and rosy finger,
Drinking draughts of beauty in!

"Tell me, whence thy beauty, fairest!
Whence thy cheeks's enchanting bloom?
Whence the rose hue thou wearest,
Breathing round thee rich perfume?"

Thus he spoke, with heart that panted,
Clasped her fondly to his side,
Gazed on her with look enchanted,
While his Helen thus replied:

"Be no discord, love, between us,
Let not the secret tell!
'T was a gift I had of Venus,—
Venus, who hath loved me well.

"And she told me as she gave it,
'Let not e'er the charm be known,
O'er thy person freely love it,
Only when thou art alone.'

"'T is enclosed in yonder casket—
Here behold its golden key:
But its name—love, do not ask it,
Tell it, I may not, even to thee!"

Long with vow and kiss he plied her,
Still the secret did she keep,
Till at length he sank beside her,
Seemed as he had dropped to sleep.

Soon was Helen laid in slumber,
When her Paris, rising slow,
Did his fair neck disencumber
From her rounded arms of snow

Then her heedless fingers oping,
Takes the key and steals away,
To the ebon table groping,
Where the wondrous casket lay;

Eagerly the I'd unclosed,
Sees within the casket lay,

WRIGHT'S PENNSYLVANIA State Reports, Vol. 3, just published and for sale by B. BANNAN.

THE May number of the Atlantic Monthly contains an admirable poem by J. R. Lowell, entitled, "Mr. Hosea Biglow's Speech at March Meeting." From it we take a few lines as samples of its quality:

Peace, that we honed 'onld come an' build last year
An' coo by ever house-door, isn't here—
No, nor won't never be for all our jaw,
Till we're ez brave in politics ez in war!
O Lord, ef folks wuz made so 's 't they could see
The bagnet plant there is to an idee!
Ten times the danger in 'em th' is in steel;
They run your soul thru an' you never feel.
But crawl about an' seem to think you're livin',
Poor shells o' men, ant with the Lord's forgiven'
Till you come bunt agin a real live fact,
An' go to pieces when you 'd ought to act!
Thet kin' o' bein' 's wut we're crossin' now,
An' no man fit to navigate a scow
'Onld stan' expectin' help from Kingdom Come
While 't other side druv their cold iron home.

My friens, you never gethered from my mouth,
No, not one word agin the South ez South,
Nor 'th ain't a livin' man, white, brown, nor black,
Gladder 'n wut I should be to take 'em back:
But all I ask of Uncle Sam is fust
To write up on his door, "No goods on trust!"
Give us cash down in ekle laws for all,
An' they'll be snug inside afore nex' fall.
Give wut they ask, an' we shell hev Jamaker,
With minus some consid'able an acre:
Give wut they need, an' we shell git 'fore long
A nation all one piece, rich, peacefle, strong;
Make 'em Amerikin, an' they'll begin
To love their country ez they loved their sin;
Let 'em stay Southun, an' you've kep' a sore
Ready to fester ez it done afore.
No mortal man can boast of perfec' vision,
But the one molebin' thing is Indecision,
An' th' ain't no futur' for the man nor state
That 's out of j-u-s-t cant spell great.
Some folks 'onld call thet reddikle: do you?
'T wuz commonsense afore the war wuz thru:
They 're drivin' or their spiles down now," sez she,
"To the hard pummit o' God's fust idee;
Ef they reach thet, Democ'cy needn't fear
The tallest airthquakes we can git up here."

Ef treason is a crime, ez some folks say,
How could we punish it a milder way
Than savin' to 'em, "Brethren, lookee here,
We'll jest shake hands with ye, clever and sheer,
An' since both come o' pooty strongbacked daddies,
You take the Darkies, ez we've took the Paddies;
Ignorant an' poor we took 'em by the hand,
An' there the bones an' sinners o' the land."
I ain't o' those thet fancy there's a loss on
Every investment thet don't start from Boston;
But I know this: our money's safest trusted
In sunshine; come wut will, thet can't be busted,
An' that's the old Amerikin idee.
To make a man a Man an' let him be.

Who wuz the 'Nited States 'fore Richmon' fell?
Wuz the South needle their full name to spell?
An' cant we spell it in the short-han' way
Till th' underpinnin' 's settled so 's to stay?
Who cares for the resolves of '61,
They tried to coax an airthquake with a bun?
Hez actin' nothin' to take place since then?
To farm folks they must handle facts like men?
Ain't this the true plint? Did the Reb accept 'em?
Ef not, whose fault is 't thet we hevn't kept 'em?
Warn't there two sides? an' don't it stand to reason
Thet this week's 'Nited States ain't las' week's treason?
When all these sums is done, with nothin' missed
