A German importer of dry goods, named Bradenburg, of St. Louis, recently married an American lady. The groom was a man of about forty, thick-set, broad-faced, yet not ill-looking, of a quiet temperament but easily flattered by any social attention; a good business man, but of only ordinary thought a moment, and then replied. POLITICO-SCULPTURE. The latest French importation on Broad-way is the art of "Photo sculptre;" in which ne sun gives not merely a picture, but a fulllength cast of any person—size to suit the purchaser. The sitter stands—if we may be allowed the paradox—in the middle of a small room with twenty four sides, each side con-taining a door. At a signal the twenty-four doors fly open, and twenty four cameras take a corresponding number of pictures of the figure from as many different points of view. These pictures are then transferred, by an ingenious process, to the twenty-four sides of a block of clay. Other processes remove those parts of the clay which are not covered by these pictures. The remaining interest of the clay which are not covered by these pictures. During the intermission between the first and second acts, the gentleman of the or-chestra stalls disappeared. On entering, Mr. Storrs bowed with grace, and in an easy, though dignified manner, apologized for his intrusion; and "explained" he was a jeweler—the head of the large house of Storrs & Co., of Boston—was in New York on business preparatory to a trip to Europe, and had become so professionally attracted by Madame's bracelets (with an elegant bow to the lady) that he could not refrain from obtaining, if possible, a nearer view; and would be much indebted if Mr. — Mr. — (Bradenburg, "suggested the merchant,)

Politico-sculpture takes him even in motion, and shows him, as it were, on the wing. If he chauges his position, every step is as promptly reported to the nation as is the price of stocks.—

The rise or fall of Beecher or of Greeley is as eagerly watched as is the rise or fall of gold. Mr. Johnson cannot do an act or utter a word that is not straightway added to that melancholy list of "dissolving views" through which he has floated down from the position of a respectable alderman to that of a disreputable president.
