The only way to have peace is to do justice to all markind. The Democratic party and the Democratic party in this country, and it was not a trail one time the radical party in this country, in the out in whith the out in whith the out in whith the out in whit that they must destroy a Government found ded in liberty. Fortunately the people of this nation had chosen for its Federal head a man who loved liberty, whose sympathies could extend to all the people of this whole country—a man the brother and the friend of all, Abraham Lincoln. He, while President, managed the affairs, of this Government in such a way that this hydra-headed mons er was crushed. It was understood, during the war, that men who committed the crime of treason forfeited their rights, civil and political and that their property should be confi cal, and that their property should be confi-cated to the United States. When the war ended the traitors laid down their arms— They said, "We have sinned under the laws.

They said, "We have sinued under the laws, what are you going to do with us?" I thought we were going to hang some of them. They did not expect to be members of Congress, Presidents, or Vice Presidents, but all they asked was the privilege of living, and, in my judgment, that was a good deal more than they were entitled to.

But treason went on until it had assashnated the President of the United States. Hundreds of thousands had fillen far away from relatives and friends. Our whole land was draped in mourning. Then Mr. Johnson bedraped in mourning. Then Mr. Johnson be-came President. He said treason must be made odious, and traitors punished. I wish to God he had kept his word. When he said Comperheads—four from Pennsylvania and one from New Jersey—voted in the affirmative. All the rest voted "no." The Repub tive. All the rest voted 'no." The Republicans who voted in the negative are from the South and West, where they have yet to educated on the subject of Protection.

belong to him under the Constitution. It is a usurpation of power for which he has no authority. Where does he get the authority to establish a State Government? If the States have destroyed their rights by treason, those rights can only be conferred upon them by Congress. The majority of the people in the South overturned their State Government of the content of the South overturned their State Govern-ments, and cut off their relations to our Gov-ernment, and then they had no organization under the Constitution of the United States. When the war ended, we found them under when the war ended, we found them under unconstitutional State Governments, without other rights than we thought proper to confer upon them. To make a State you must have territory, you must have a political organization which must be in accordance with our Constitution, and must be accepted by Congress. When the Southern States were first organized they had all those elements, but now all we have left is, the soil and the traitors. There is no State there. It is a State in name, but not a practical State; and he who undertakes to assert that the South in their treason have not destroyed their States, is too big an ass to be the president of an in surance company, to say nothing of the Presi is too big an ass to be the president of an in surance company, to say nothing of the President of the United States. Congress had the power to organize States there, but Mr. John son had no power over the matter. Mr. Johnson said that Mississippi was entitled to the same rights as Connecticut, and yet he appointed Governor Sharkey Provisional Governor there. How would you like to have him appoint a governor for you in Connecticut? He ordered elections to be held, and rebels were elected in every instance Every crime known in the catalogue of crimes

He ordered elections to be held, and rebels were elected in every instance Every crime known in the catalogue of crimes has been committed in the Southern States killing the freedmen, murdering the loyal men, and why? Because they hate our Government, and mob law is to be their watch word until our Government shall be so tired of them as to be willing to let them go.

The reconstruction bill will only be a law by passing it over the veto. For one I want to see it done. [Applause.] It is a step in the right direction. I coniess I am in no hurry for the Southern States to come back. We did not invite them to get out, but they cannot come back without our invitation, and I, for one, never will vote to allow any man to enter the halls of Congress, who has Browell, Julian, Strouse, Strouse, Strouse, Cobb, Kelso, Taylor (Tonn.), Cook, Kerr, Taylor (N. THE BELATION OF THE PARENT TO Perhaps there are few subjects of a social haracter which deserve a more careful inquiry than this; and yet it is to be regreted that comparatively few parents seem to feel any responsibility or duty resting upon them in this relation, further than to "get their money back," as the stying is, by sending their children to school whenever their services can be dispensed with at home, then at the end of the term, if they find that their children have made little or no progress, pardoned every traitor who asked it, and many who did not, and he now asks that they all be pardoned, that their property shall be restored, that they shall themselves be admitted to share in the government of the country, and that is what the Democratic party indorse. To organize the Southern States Andrew Johnson has violated the law, and taken upon himself powers that do not belong to him under the Constitution. It is a usurpation of power for which he has no still rests on the parent; can the teacher be regarded in any other light than simply as an assistant to aid the parent in doing that which it is inconvenient for him to do alone,—to assist him in developing the mind of his child? Yet it is too true, that a large majority of parents throw the labor of instructing and governing the pupils entirely on the teacher.—

Herein is the great follows of parental duty.—
The parent is ordained by nature to be the tutor of his child. He can exercise over it the believes that his parents are truthful, and thinks they know what is right and what is wrong. He is sait to one whom he may be inclined to respect; but will he, can he regard this person as being equally as wise as his parents, unless his parents tell him so, and carefully impress the idea upon him? Granting, also, that the teacher is really a teacher—that he possesses, in addition to a thorough knowledge of the branches he proposes to teach, the art of instruction and governing his teach, the art of instructing and governing his pupils—can he even with the aid of all this.
