THE GOOD WIFE: It is just as you say, neighbor Green, A treasure indeed is my wife: Such another for bustle or work, I never have found in my life. But then she keeps every one elec As busy as birds on the wing : There is never a moment for rest, She is such a fidgety thing. She makes the best bread in the town. Her ples are a perfect delight, Her coffee a rich golden brown, Her crullers and puddings just right. But then while I eat them she tells Of the care and the worry they bring, Of the martyr-like toll she endures, Oh she's such a fidgety thing. My house is as neat as a pin, And all of the soft cushioned chairs, And nicely swept carpets are mine But then she so frets at the dust, At a fly, at a straw or a string. That I stay out of doors all I can, She is such a fidgety thing! She doctors the neighbors. O, yes, If a child has the mearles or croup, Her dainty made gruels and soup. But then she insists on the right. To physic my blood in the spring: Oh, she's such a fidgety thing! She knits all my-stockings herself, But then if a moreel of lint. Or dust to my trowsers should cling, . I'm sure of one sermon at least, She is such a fidgety thing. You have heard of a spirit so meek, So meek that it never opposes, It own it dares never to speak-Alas I am meeker than Mores But then I am not reconciled The subordinate music to sing I submit to get rid of a row, She is such a fidgety thing ! It's just as you say neighbor Green, A treasure to me has been given ; But sometimes I fain would be glad To lay up my treasure in heaven! But then every life has its cross. But she's such a fidgety thing. OLD VIRGINIA "Where might you be from, stranger?" "Yes, sir, old Virginia," was the reply. "Oh, in course," showered the sucker. Proposals for the purchase of this Land Scrip. THOS. L. HOLT, AGT., Pennsylvania for the endowment of Agricultural Colleges in this State.

Proposals for the purchase of this Land Scrip addressed to "The Board of Commissioners of Agricultural Land Scrip," will be received at the Surveyor General's office, at Harrisburg, until 12 o'clock, M., on Wednesday, April 10, 1807.

This land may be alocated in any State or Territory, by the holders of the scrip, upon any of the unappropriated lands (except mineral lands) of the United States, which may be subject to sale at private entry. Each piece of scrip represents a quarter section of one hundred and sixty acres, is issued in blank, and will be transferable, without endorsement or formal assignment. The blank need not be filled until the scrip is presented for location and entry, when the party holding it can fill the blank and enter the land in his own name. Bids must be made as per acre, and no bids will be received for less than one quarter section.

The Scrip will be issued immediately on the payment of the money to the Surveyor General. On all bids for a less quantity than 40,000 acres, one-third of the purchase money must be paid within ten days, and the remaining two-thirds within thirty days after notification of the acceptance of the bid or bids by the Board of Commissioners.

The Farmer.

THE MORAL INFLUENCE OF FARMING It is well to set forth, occasionally, some of the arguments in favor of the farmer's calling in order to counterbalance the lutlaences that are drawing so many of our people into the villages and cities. A young man, about to choose his calling for life, should seriously consider whether its influences will probably be such as will tend to establish a good moral character. We know that such considerations generally have but little weight with the young-that the prayer, "lead us not into temptation," is sellom uttered by them, although of the highest importance; because they are so confident of their ability to take care of themselves, and resist temptation whenever they may present themselves. Yet here is where the greatest danger lies. A young man, trained to virtuous habits, will be more likely to resist any sudden temptation to depart widely from his early teachings, than those inducements which present themselves, in his daily occupations, to vary slightly and gradually from hose correct principles which have hitherto zaided him. Those little concealments and deceptions so generally practiced in commerce, to make sale of goods, gradually weaken a man's intogrity and diminish his self respect, and often pave the way to greater departures from virtues. A lawyer is tempted by a large fee to espouse an upjust cause, until after a while the habit of advocating the wrong makes an inroad upon his moral character, and dead. ens his perceptions of right and wrong. The doctor wants patients, and the temptation to keep a rich one on his bed longer than nocessary, is often irresistible. And so, if we go through the various vocations of man to btain the wherewith to sustain life, we shall find that most of those that offer large returns for moderate efforts, exert influences that gradually sap the foundations of moral character. On the contrary, most of the influences pertaining to the farmer's calling have a tendency to strengthen his moral char-First, he is sustained by the conviction that his calling is an honest one-that the products of his labors bless his fellow creatures -minister to their natural wants, instead of creating artificial ones. If any conscientions farmer doubts that the growing of healthy food has a tendency to strengthen his virtue, let him try the experiment of growing a crop f tobacco, and see if he is sustained by an approving conscience. Certainly it requires

o argument to convince any one, that pursuing a course in opposition to the dictates f conscience, is a moral injury. Again, the farmer's sense of justice, of juity, is sustained by the consciousness that e is fairly earning his living—that he is giving an equivalent for his food and raiment.e, who by fortunate speculation, or by lrawing a prize in a lottery, or by inventing a popular medicine, is enabled to acquire a large fortune by little effort, does not enjoy the consoling reflection, that be has given a fair equivalent for his great wealth. The farmer's life brings him daily into the closest intimacy with nature, and he is continually reminded of his dependence upon an overruling Providence, for the fruits of his labors. In every blade of grass, in every tiny flower, in the smallest insect, as well as in the noblest animal, in the creation and growth of every species of vegetables and animals, he beholds a power and a mechanism beyond his comprehension and imitation, and he knows that a greater Being than man, is their Author. When he sows the seed upon the growth and maturity of which the prolonged existence of man depends, he knows that unless the Creator gives his genial sun, and sends the "early and the latter rains," it will never germinate or grow into the bread, or fruit, or vegetable, that sustains life. But the manufacturer deals with nature at second hand. He receives the raw meterial from the farmer, and converts it into the various forms, convenient for use. The-merchant still further removed from nature, exchanges the products of one country, or section of country, for those of another. His associations are more with man than nature, and he relies for success more upon his own wisdom and shrewdness, than upon the guidance of Providence. And thus, in none of the vocations of mankind are they so constantly reminded that there is a God, as is the farmer's. The home influences of the farmer's life are conductive to virtue. He partakes of his meals, and spends his evenings by his own fireside, in the bosom of his family, subjected to those healthful and refining influences, enjoyed nowhere else so well as in the society of women and innocent children. The townsman who spends his evenings in a round of amusements, attending balls, parties, theatres, operas, &c, &c, knows but little of the happiness to be enjoyed at home. He goes abroad for those social stimulants, which the farmer finds at home, and is ex-Respectfully announces to the public that he has now on band the largest and best assortment of household furnishing goods ever offered in this region, which he is selling at greatly reduced prices. Those wishing goods in his line would do well to call and see his stock before purchasing, elsewhere. He feels condident that it cannot be enrassed in cheapness and dent that it cannot be enrassed in cheapness and dent that it cannot be enrassed in cheapness and quality. His stock consists of Kitchen Ranges, Heaters, Cooking, Parlor and Hall Stoves of all kinds and sizes. Tin, Hollow Brass, Britannia, Glass, Japanese and Wood en and Willow Wares, Brooms, Brashes, Nieves for Cool and Flour. Coffee Mills, Knives and Forks, Spoons, French Wares, Water Coolers, Tin Safes, Refrigerators, Fruit Jars, Baskets, Spades, Shovels, Picks, Gardon Tools, Nails, Coal Hods, Tea Scales, Coal Oil Lamps, Hanging, Side and Stand Lamps, Lanterns, and many other articles too numerous the months of the property of the stanter man and would be shiel-defined from in his own family. These are weighty considerations in favor a farmer's life. Who would not feel safer in rearing a family upon a farm, than exposed to the vices and corruptions of a city? Who does not believe that his son, trained up to a life of labor—tilling the soil—would be less likely to go astray, than if brought up in a city where he can scarcely step into the street without encountering the immeral, the posed to temptations that he would be shiel-

SELECTING SHEEP. The most approved form in a sheep is general roundness of shape and fineness of bone. The chest should be broad, the ribs well arched, the back and loins, broad flat and straingt; the limbs should be short in proportion to the body, the head small, the ears thin, the skin soft and elastic. the wool soft to the touch, thick, and coming well forward to the face, but not covering it. The face and forehead should be clothed with short hair, and the eyes should have a lively expression.

To PROTECT SHEEP FROM Does.—If sheep are kept in the same lot with cows or fat cattle, no dog will disturb them. As soon as the dogs approach the sheep, they run to the cattle who drive off the dogs. A farmer for thirty years, in Shelby county, by adopting this plan, never lost a sheep by dogs, although in the same night the same dogs killed sheep in the farms north and south of DRY HAT FOR COWS IN SUMMER.—COWS sometimes get a surfeit of grass, especially in wet, warm weather, when the grass is succulent and rich. This feed distends the bowels uncomfortably. An armful of dry hay once a day will serve to absorb some of this moisture, and benefit the cow in several respects.
