ROCK ME TO SLEEP, MOTHER Rackward, turn backward. O. Time in your flight, Make me a child again. Just for it -oight! Mother come back from the cholese shore, Take me again to your heart sof yore: Siss from my forchead the furrows of care, Smooth the few sliver threads out from my hair. over my slumbers your loving watch keep, lock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep!

Backward, flow backward, O, tide of years!
I am 6) weary of toils and of tears,
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain,
Take them and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of duet and decay,
Weary of flinging my soul's wealth away,
Weary of sowing for others to reap!
Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep! Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue, Mother, O mother, my heart calls for you! Many a summer the grass has grown green, Riessomad and faded, our face between, Yet with strong yearning and passionate particularly to night for your presence again; Cume from the silence so long and so deep. Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep

Over my beart, in days that have flown, No love like mother-love ever was shown Over my beart, in days that have flown, No lave like mother-love ever was shown: No other worship abides and endures, Faithful, unselfash and patient, like yours: None like a mother can charm away pain, From the sick soul and world-weary brain clumber's soft calm o'er my heavy lids creep, Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep! Come, let your bright hair just lighted with gold, Fall on your shoulders again as of old; Let it fail over my forehead to-night. Shading my faint eyes away from the light: For with its sunny-edged shadows once more Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore; Lovingly, softly, its bright billows sweep; Rock me to sleep!

Mother, dear mother, the years have been long Sinced I hast hushed to your lullsby song: Since then, and unto my soul it shall seem. Womanhood's years have been but a dream Clasped to your arms in a loving embrace. With your light lashes just sweeping my face, Never hereafter to wake or to weep. Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep.

THE SERVICE OF PLATE.

BY ALFRED CROWQUILL. I have been in one situation forty years, and, like a squirrel in a cage, have progressed by going the same round every day; yet I have had my little ambitions, which, however, never interfered with the due digestion of my eight o'clock breakfast, one o'colck din or my eight o clock oreasiss, one o coick in net, six o'clock tea, and nine o'clock supper; indeed, my lite ran on in a calm, unruffled stream, devoid of precipices and antagonistic rocks; in fact, it could not be called a mur muring stream. letter was handed to me. I borrowed my elidest girls esisons to snip round the seal for I am too methodical to tear anything. Tead. Good heavens: my face flashed and my hands shock, my wife and daughter segments and my hands shock, my wife and daughter segments. It was to inform me that segments are rowded round me, alarmed at my unwonted signation. I read it aloud, and they partook of my excitement. It was to inform me that a point of my knot, problem of my secretary for many years, proposed, as they were pleased to say, to present me for my hone, problem of my hone, problem of a service of plate consisted of.

We soon knew what it was. I pass over the intervening days between the letter and the presentation, the agony and disturbance of my system on the day thereof, and the speeches of the chairman and committee, and my reply. The secretary put something down in the minutes purporting to be a faithful report of that bit of eloquence, but as to my having spoken it, I have not even to this day been weak enough to believe. I remembered nothing distinctly until I found myself rolling home in a carriage, half filled with packages—"The service of plate!"

Upon my arrival at home, my wife and daughters soon brought to light the magnificant present, first—a salver as large as a teatray, upon which was inscribed, as nearly as I could recollect; the substance of the chairman's speech, attributing to me all the virtues under the sun (here my wife and daughters kissed me, evidently astonished at possessing, such a father and husband); next a tea pot went-the round of admiration, then a coffee pot, milk jug, sugar basin, and tea spoons, delightfully heavy, royal pattern, fiddle head and handled, as I afterwards learned; again there was some costa attached to the possession of a service of plate.

In the course of time, one young man would bring music for my eldest daughter; indeed so perseveringly bring his flute and practice duets with my second my four-handed cribbage was entirely knocked on the head. Through all this one strange innovation my wife would sit and strange i went the round of admiration, then a coffee pot, milk jug, sugar busin, and tea-spoons, their various relations.

The servants had luckily been kept in ignorance of our acquisition, and, consequently, could not gossip in the neighborhood.

I do not think that I, my wife, or daughters, slept a wink that night. The service of plate was galloping through our brains to the utter destruction of our usual calm repose.

Then what was safe from such ingenuity, since iron and Mr. Bramah failed to circumvent those terrible inventions?

Emma took the glass in her little hand, and, with a smile which few could have resisted, said, "Come, James, you will take just this one glass?"

"No, Emma," he answered with a painful effort, "I have made up my mind, and you must not ask me to change it.

I, of course, in my nervousness, was foolish enough to borrow the book, and show it to my wife and daughters, who were thereby brought into a frightful state of nervousness surpassing my own. Then again, the car penter was so busy that he sent a strange man to proceed with our job; thus another stranger was let into the secret in the most unlooked for manner, and we felt in our despair that our throats were not worth a week's purchase. Oh! how often did I think of my school copy, that I had written in a bold round hand in the days of threepence a week pocket money, which never troubled me—"He who gathereth treasure often destroyeth sleep." Oh! how true my juvenile round hand proverb proved to me in my middle age, when I possessed a "service of plate!" and I was really desponding enough to wish that we would be robbed of it, without any fuss, and return to the simplicity of our original leaspoons, counted up every night; at bed.

I was really desponding enough to wish that we would be robbed of it, without any fuss, and return to the simplicity of our original feaspoons, counted up every night at bed time; and always right.

Our time for going out of town was fast approaching, but I saw no preparation being made for the usual month's absence and enjoyment by the sea side. "We can't take the plate out of town with us," said my wife, and how can we possibly leave it behind us to the mercy of the thieves, who have no doubt read all about it in the newspaper, and only wait for our leaving to pounce upon it, and perhaps murder old Sarah? I should never forgive myself."
