HEYI'S PECTORALIS for the sure of COUGHS, COLDS, and SORENESS OF THE CHEST, pronounced by those who have used it to be the best remedy for the cure of colds ever offered to the public. Read the following testimonial:

FORTSYLLE, May 18th, 1883.

Louis C. Heyi., Esq.—Dear Sir.—It affords me pleasure to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Pectoralis," in removing Coughs and Bronchial Affections, having found immediate and permanent relief from the use of one bottle, after having tried many other remedies for a very severe cold and cough with which I suffered for some six weeks during the past winter. Respectfully yours.

lite, in part the cause of his own immediate reverses, so much impaired his health as to compel his departure to a Southern climate, where happily, though late in life, the effects of early impressions, and the remembrance of the precepts of his long lost father, produced a radical change in his heart, and gave a new impulse to the muse which years before had often delighted and astonished the lovers of sons. the lovers of song.

The beautiful pathos of the following effusion will be doubly relished after a knowledge of the foregoing circumstances. We here present the poem in its entire form, and not abridged as it has frequently aparencered:

How painfully pleasing the fond recollection
Of youthful connexions and innocent joy,
When blessed with parental advice and affection
Surrounded with mercies—with peace from on highI still view the chairs of my sire and my mother,
The seat of their offspring as ranged on each hand
And that richest of books which excelled every other—
That Family Bible that lay on the stand:
The old fashioned Bible, the dear blessed Bible,
The Family Bible that lay on the stand. That Bible, the volume of God's inspiration,
At morn and at evening could yield us delight;
And the prayer of our sire was a sweet invocation,
For mercy by day, and for safety through night;
Our hymns of thanksgiving, with harmony swell
All warm from the heart of a family band,
Half raised us from earth to that rapturous dwell
Described on the Bible that lay on the stand;
That richest of books which excelled every other,
That Family Bible that lay.

Ye scenes of tranquility, long have we parted—
My hopes almost gone and my parents no more:
In sorrow and sadness I live broken hearted,
And wander unknown on a far distant shore:
Yet how can I doubt a dear Saviour's protection,
Forgetful of gifts from his bountiful hand,
Oh! let me with patience receive his correction
And think of the Bible that lay on the stand:
That richest of books which excelled every other,
That Family Bible that lay on the stand. Blest Bible, the light and the ruide of the stranger, With thee I seem encircled with parents and friend Thy kind admonition shall guard me from danger. On thee my last lingering hope then depends: Hope wakens to vigor, and rises to glory, I'll hasten and fiee to the promised land, For refuge lay hold on the hope set before me. Revealed in the Bible that lay on the stand: The old fashioned Bible, the dear blessed Bible, The Family Bible that lay on the stand.

Hail, rising the brightest and best of the morning. The star which has guided my parents safe home. A beam of thy glory my pathway adorning. Shall scatter the darkness, and brighten my gloon As the eastern sages, to worship the stranger. In ectacy hastened to Canani's land—I'll bow to adore him but not in a manger. He's seen in the Bible that lay on the stand: The old-fashioned Bible, the dear blessed Bible, The Family Bible that lay on the stand. Though age and misfortune press hard on my feelings.
I'll fiee to the Bible and trust in the Lord,
Though darkness shall cover his merciful dealings,

Though darkness shall cover his merciful dealing My soul is still cheered by His Heavenly word : nd now from things earthly my soul is removing, I soon shall shout glory with Heaven's bright band n rsptures of lay be forever adoring The God of the Bible that lay on the stand: The old-fashioned Bible, the dear blessed Bible, The Family Bible that lay on the stand. Large and Enthusiastic Republican Meeting in Allegheny County. Biographical Sketch of Our Candidate, Judge Williams.

On Thursday evening, July 18, 1867, a large, enthusiastic meeting of the Republicans of Allegheny County, Pa, was held in City Hall, Pittsburgh. James Park, Jr., presided, assisted by the Mayor of Pittsburgh, and a large number of distinguished and influential citizens as Vice Presidents and Secretaries.

A: B. M. Smith, Esq., was introduced to the meeting, and proceeded to deliver the following biographical sketch of our worthy candidate. He said:

I come here to night, my fellow-citizens, to perform what is to me a pleasant duty—to join with you in giving our adherance to the platform of principles adopted by the great Union Republican party of this State at the Convention lately held in Williamsport, and in manifesting our satisfaction and pleasure in the nomination by that Convention of our fellow-citizen, Hon. Henry W. Williams, as a candidate for election to the highest judicial position of this Commonwealth.

While I shall express my cordial approval of the principles enunciated in that wise, moderate and patriotic creed of political faith, which breathes, in every line, a love for freedom and human rights, mixed with the content of the laws of the case of the laws of the laws of the case of the laws of the laws of the case of the laws of the case of the laws of the laws of the case of the laws of the case of the laws of the case of the laws of th While I shall express my cordial approval of the principles enunciated in that wise, moderate and patriotic creed of political faith, which breathes, in creey line, a love for freedom and human rights, mixed with no demand for vengeance, by saying that I would hardly add to, or detract, one word therefrom, I shall leave its discussion to those able gentlemen who may follow, and devote the brief time allotted me upon this occasion in speaking of the personal, moral, and political fact fairly to their determination. Judge Williams is emphatically an honest, impartial and just Judge. He cannot be turned a hair's breadth, by prejudice, by favor, or by interest from what he believes to be instice to the cause before him. So well in speaking of the personal, moral, and political and judicial character of our candidate; and it is, perhaps, fitting that I should do this, as I have known Judge Williams longer and more intimately, than any other person in this house.

My acquaintance with him commenced in College in 1833, as class mate, and since that time I have studied with him, taught with him, and practiced in my profession with, and under him. I have known him as student as teacher, as lawyer and as Judge, and what is more, during all that time I have known him as an intimate, personal friend vor, or by interest from what he believes to be justice to the cause before him. So well is his stern integrity as a Judge understood in this community, that no counsel or suitor ever undertook to influence him in the decision of a cause pending before him, save by legal testimony and sound legal argument.

Judge Williams is a Christian gentleman, a ripe scholar, a sound and well-read lawyer and a just Judge, to whom the celebrated lines of the opening of the third ode of Horace will apply with as much force and truth as to any other man:

Justum ac tensem propositi virum. in speaking of the personal, moral, and po-litical and judicial character of our candidate;

known him as an intimate, personal friend I have known him more thoroughly than I have ever known any other living man, not excepting my own brother, and I say here to-night, in presence of this large audience, that, even were I so disposed, I could truthfully speak no ill of him.

Judge Williams is of the good old revolutionary Whig stock, which achieved our national independence in 1776, and from his ancestors he has inherited a sturdy love of

The author was an English gentleman of the finest talents, who had been in a very heavy mercantile business with his fathers and brothers in Liverpool, and frequently had occasion to visit this country.—

The most romantic vicissitudes overtook him and his nearest relatives, such as the most vivid fancy could scarcely conceive. A free life, in part the cause of his own immediate reverses, so much impaired his health as to compel his departure to a Southern climate, where happily, though late in life, the effects and sover James S. So well, faithfully, impartially and satisfactorily did Judge Williams discharge the duties of his office, and so learned, upright and useful a Judge did he prove himself to be, in the estimation of all men, that at the close of his first judicial term of ten years, in 1861 the was nominated by acclaration by the then two great parties of the country, and was reselected without opposition from any quarter. Such renewed evidences of popularity and appreciation in one's own neighborhood, and among men of all parties. and among men of all parties, are very rare, and most clearly forshadow the very flatter-ing vote which the Judge will receive from ing vote which the Judge will receive from the people of this county on the second Tuesday of October next.

Judge Williams' manners and bearing are always pleasing. In social intercourse, he is the life of the circle in which he mingles. Cheerful, lively and witty, never by look or word, intentionally, wounding the feelings, or speaking ill of any one, he makes friends of all. His extensive reading and large information upon all sublects, make his society

Judge Williams' moral and religious char-acter is beyond reproach. Temperate and chaste in all things, truthful in his words, and honest and upright in all his dealings, neither by word nor by act does he ever offend pub-lic decency, or bring the cause of sound mor-als and true religion into reproach. In politics, Judge Williams was at the first a Whig of the Clay and Webster school, holding with the former that protection to some extent was necessary to encourage and foster the industrial interests of Pennsylvania, and with the latter that there was no object in our politics so much to be constantly kept in mind and maintained, in every event, as the perpetual union of these States. When the exigencies of the times gave birth to the Republican party, his far seeing patriotism, and his long cherished love of the Union, led him to cast his votes and give his influence so far as it was consistent with his official station, in favor, of the principles and candidates of that party. During the rebellion he supported the Government and the armies of the Union by every means in his power, upholding the credit and authority of the former, and encouraging by constant faith the glorious success of the latter. Those intimate with him will not readily forget his energetic utterances against treason and traitors, and should at all hazards, be preserved.—While no partisan or ultraist in politics, he is in favor of improvement and reform, when

"No," said the little boy, "I have not." "Then," said the minister, "I will help you to find them," whereupon he knelt down and helped to look for the marbles, and as he did helped to look for the marbles, and as he did so, remarked, "I liked to play marbles when a little boy, very much, and I think I can beat you, but I never played marbles on Sunday."

The little boy's attention was arrested. He liked his friend's face, and began to wondar who he was. The minister of the gospel said: and responsible as any in the State. It has been adorned by some of the best legal minds, and it is not saying too much of him to say that he has proved himself in every respect the equal of any of them. During

"I am going to a place where I think you would like to be—will you come with me?"
"Where do you live?" said the little boy.
"Why, in such and such a place," was the reply.
"Why, that is the minister's house," exclaimed the boy, as if he did not suppose that kind man and the minister of the gospel could be one and the same person "Why," said the man, "I am the minister myself, and if you will come with me I think I can do you some good."
Said the boy, "My hands are dirty; I can't go." Said the minister, "Here is a pump—why wash and pump at the same time."
Said the minister, "If you will wash I will pump."
He at once set to work, and pumped, and pumped, and pumped; and as he pumped the little boy washed his hands and face till they were quite clean.

Said the boy, "my hands are wringing wet, and I do not know how to dry them." The minister pulled out of his pocket a clean handkerchief and offered it to the little boy. Said the boy, "But it is clean." "Yes," was the reply, "but it was made to with the handkerchief, and then accompanied the minister to the house of worship.

Twenty years after, the minister was walking in the street of a large city, when a tallgentleman tapped him on the shoulder, and looking into his face said, "You can't remember me?"

"No," said the minister, "I don't." "No," said the minister, "I don't."
"Do you remember twenty years ago, finding a little boy playing marbles around a pump? Do you remember that boy being too dirty to go to school, and your pumping for him, and your speaking kindly to him, and taking him to school?"

"Oh," said the minister, "I do remember."
"Sir," said the gentleman, "I was that boy.
I rose in business and become a leading men.
