MAXIMILIAN-NAPOLEON-JEFF. DAVIS. While the war-cloud of the Rebellion hung over the land, and its fearful power, and the still mightier force of the struggling Republic with which it was resisted, excited the wonder of the world, there sailed on the ocean Shipman, McWilliams and West, of Danville, almost along our borders, and almost in sight of the terrific throes of the gallant nation engaged in a desperate life-conflict for freedom, a vessel which carried from the bayo net-guarded, and the dangeon and fetterbuilt throne of Austria, to the unhappy shores of distracted and ill-fated Mexico, a land clothed in glowing and exuberant beauty, in sad contrast with the gloomy desolation that seemed to hang over all her hopes and prospects-s Prince and a Princess, who were hailed and were crowned with the imperial and vexed question as to the true boundaries of important surveys, embracing an extensive indy of the sources connected with it. After years of anxious search, certain important lines and corners were found and established, by clearly defined monuments, on the anniversary of the day on which they were made seventy odd years ego, in 1793. The old compass used by John Reese, the old surveyer, to run the lines and fix the boundaries originally in 1793, passed down through various owners, into the possession of Mr. David Rockaffeller, of Sunbury, and discover the old original corners. Third Begiment, United Sistes Od-ored Troops, a gallant soldier of the Bebellion, were interred in the colored burying ground, this Borough, with military honors. A large number of our citizans attended the fumeral, and the company of colored man with their military case, blouses, and bright muskes, under command of Capt. Joseph Tarr, attracted much situation by the precision of their movements and excellent marching. They numbered twenty-fire, inclu-ding three musicians. At the grave the customs ary salute was fired. The deceased was a son of Jane Buehler, the colored woman of this Borough, who is 106 years of age, and who up to a very recent period has preserved her faculties in a surprising manner. We understand howver, that her eye-sight is now failing, and that she has been compelled to give up work in consequence. She has for many years been a worthy member of the Methodist church. Having returned in safety after the edventurous visit to the Grindelwald gisciers, I proceeded in a steaml oat to the Grindelwald gizcies, i proceeded in a steamtont on Lake Brienz to the Griesbach waterfall, which is undoubtedly, one of the finest cascades in the world.— The Griesbach is a stream of water about the size of Norwegian Creek after a preity smart rain. It has its source in the great Scheideck Monitala, whence it here falls in a series of pitches that follow each other in finmediate succession, a distance of probably, six hun-dred feet. Under one of these distinct abutes, about midway from the commencement of the fall, a bridge is constructed, over which one may pass and look through the sheet of water and spray into the valley be-low. At night during the summer season, the proprie-it model water and spray into the valley be-low.
